There has been worse governors than McKelvie. So why kick so hard?

From present indications Congressman Reavis will have but little opposition for re-election.

The price of a pullman ticket nowadays will make a good many people sit up and take notice.

Photographs of Trail's End reveal no front porch—which may account for Cox's traveling campaign.

A million trees have already been planted by the Jews in Palestine in their efforts to reforest that land.

The reason some people don't talk more than they do is that they can't think of anything else to say about themselves.

It is not the fortunes of war that most of us complain about but the profiteering that makes some of the war fortunes.

Governor Cox gets around so people can see him, but to see Harding the people have to go to his home in Marion, Ohio.

If the coal miners and the railroads could pass the coal as quickly as they do the back there would be danger of a shortage.

It has got so a fellow cannot have an explosion in his home without being suspected of running some kind of a booze-making plant.

A woman is running for congress in the Third district. Well, what of it? If the women vote solid for her she can be elected.

Paper suits are arriving from Germany, a country which knows more about the value of scraps of paper than it did a few years ago.

The Cubs chosen to play an exhibition game at Marion. Harding may be against the league of nations but he's for the national league.

In other days in the heat of political excitement, a movement toward the hip may have been a warning of danger. Now it may arouse hope.

Every now and then a bank robber is "surrounded by a posse" which is a gentle way of breaking the news to the public that the robber has escaped.

The maids in King George's palaces have been granted an eight hour day. The King will have to learn to wind the clock and put the cart out.

The verdict in the case against slacker Bergdoll was returned in less than five minutes, but that's probably counting the time the jury took on its way to and from the court room.

The politicians who stated that the women would be decorating the election booths with flowers and ribbons have discovered that women also can hang crepe effectively.

Gold is reported to have been discovered in New York near Wall street, but probably it wasn't found by any of the same fellows who have lost so much in that neighborhood.

"Why don't Harding get out among the people?" asked a republican friend. We told him we did not know, unless his losses were afraid he would say something they didn't want him to.

Why Some Women Dress Better

SOME women have learned that there are two ways to care for clothes. They are learning to take care of them.

It is quite a mannerly thing to take care of your clothes investment and protect it up to the limit. Having your clothes carefully dry cleaned will improve their wear and help to prolong the life of their stylish lines.

Someone poked a hole in the sugar bag.

Maybe the campaign fund inquiry will add a bit of jazz to a rather dull presidential race.

These days when a frisky old man is asked how he feels, the proper reply is "just glad."

By the way, Harding says his front porch has no side-steps as charged by democrats.

Lord Strathbrooke is the new British governor of Victoria. He is not a member of the well known Stony-broke family.

Foch is coming to the United States for a visit, thus renewing the controversy over the correct pronunciation of his name.

"Russians Hurl Fresh Columns on Poles," says a headline. That's nothing to the columns newspapers are hurling on both sides.

The news that Baron Wrangle has captured the key to Russian coal basin doesn't thrill you as it would if he had the key to your coal basement.

IN THE SEA OF EVASION

Probably to none in this country has Senator Harding brought more distress so far in his campaign than to those of his own party who have sincere opinions regarding the league of nations. With advisers on both sides at his elbow, the result has been a meandering of words of vague meaning and to vagueness has been added contradiction and "reservation." While seeking to conceal his real hostility to the league with the suggestion of an "association" or a "society" of nations, he continues to hold the loyal support of Johnson and Borah, who very properly appraise the statements of the candidate according to facts as they know them.

To still further begog the thoroughly advised candidate for the office of president, Senator Lodge adds his contribution in a statement last Saturday. It would be wrong, he said, for his party to make "any pledges" as to what "would do with the league of nations seven months hence," since conditions are "changing every day." "And," says the Times, "what are republican principles for except to change with them?" The Times further quotes Lodge: "It may be impossible to ratify with reservations." Lodge advises the senator that "ratify" is a bad word for him to use, since the "treaty then is not that ghastly corpse for which the republicans have been demanding disinfected and speedy burial."

Such is the wretched situation in which the republican party finds itself as a result of seeking to justify the policy which began long ago in the course of the partisan, small-minded and selfish oligarchy of the senate. With the greatest opportunity for America's hearty participation and even leadership in a new era of nations, with the hope of preventing future great wars, and with at least the opportunity of casting the great influence of this great republic on the right side, we are given the spectacle of Harding, not content to believe that the people of this country, the voters, both men and women, will find their way to the hearts of this great issue. No effort of evasion or policy of negation will stand the test in the next two months. Increasing strength will come to the candidate who says simply and without quibble "I favor going in."

In a leading editorial the Philadelphia Public Ledger discusses the reasons why bolshevism cannot gain headway in this country. "The answer," says the Ledger, "is the simple setting out of what has been done in American life for the comforts, the conveniences, the health, the happiness and the prosperity of the people as a whole by private initiative and government agencies." There is argument in that, but if by petting, misrepresenting and betraying republican party politicians should fool the American public on the issue of the league of nations, considerations yet more important would influence the people than the possession of conveniences, or present comforts and even of present prosperity. There is a deep seated aversion to the repetition or imitation of another world war; there is a very large agreement on the abstract proposition of a league of nations for peace and orderliness. To trifle with that feeling is dangerous, but after all we do not believe the American people are going to be fooled.

GIVE THE FARMER A CHANCE

Governor Cox, addressing a convention of the national board of farm organizations at Columbus this week, declared that "farmers are not only entitled to larger representation in government, but the public service will have its efficiency advanced by larger representation of agricultural thought."

To give effect to this idea he promised that, in the event of his election to the presidency, he would appoint real "dirt" farmers to the federal reserve board, to the directorships of the regional reserve banks, on the tariff commission and on the interstate commerce commission. He would do this because he believes that these great governing bodies by their action vitally affect farming interests the same as other interests, and should therefore include in their membership men who know something about farming and its needs because they are farmers themselves. Why not?

We are accustomed to speak of agriculture as the backbone of our national greatness and prosperity, and it is the truth. Farming is our basic industry. If it prospers all other industries will prosper. If it experiences reverse the effect is felt by every business and by every citizen. Yet the tendency of government has been too much paternal with respect to other industries, like manufacturing, shipping and transportation, and too much neglectful of farming, the most important of them all. Government is turned over very largely to lawyers and bankers and business men and scholars—and then we wonder why agriculture decays and there is so ominous a movement from the farms to the cities. It is all wrong, a great mistake, and Governor Cox, himself a practical "dirt" farmer, realizes it and proposes to remedy it.

His remedy is simple and direct. Give the farmer greater representation, and so more power in the control of government. They are as much interested as any business man or banker in the control of the federal reserve system; in the interstate commerce commission; in the banking commission; in the tariff commission; in the tariff commission; in the tariff commission. Why not give them representation in these bodies? Why not let the voice of the farmer be heard where it will count for something? It is a remedy as practical as it is simple. It is preposterous to say that there are not farmers to be found just as well qualified by experience and education and ability, to serve the country on these important boards as can be found in any other walk of life.

It is time to give the farmer a fair chance for his white ally along with the lawyers. Governor Cox proposes to do it. —World-Herald.

You're taking the right step when you switch to Spurr

YOU can't do better. After you've smoked through a pack of Spurr, you won't want to go back to other cigarettes. You'll find your old kind sort of flat and uninteresting, like last year's politics. For Spurr's good tobacco taste can't help but win you for keeps. There's rich, mellow Turkish, flavorful Burley and other home-grown tobaccos blended in a new way that brings out to the full the all-round goodness of this top-notch cigarette.

And Spurr top all—all ways. They're crimped. That means slow burn, smooth taste—no paste. The smart "brown-and-silver" package is three-fold to keep Spurr fresh and fragrant. Twentycents will prove that Spurr are your kind of cigarettes—top-notch quality at rock-bottom price. The sooner you try them the gladder you'll be.
