AUTOS RACE TO SAVE HUMAN LIFE

Heroic Effort Made to Save the Life of Weeping Water Lad, but Death Proved Victor.

Last Saturday evening between the hours of 5 and 6 as people were loitering on the streets just before going to their supper or waiting for the evening mail, suddenly out of the north appeared a cloud of dust and out of the cloud shot forth a Buick touring car with but a single occupant and moving with the speed of a hurricane. It bore down upon the town with a swish.

The car was easily making 60 miles per hour as it shot to the north crossing entering the business section and when it reached the postoffice was possibly running at a speed of 40 miles. When the brakes were applied the car slid fully 20 feet and a tremendous scorching of rubber could be seen on the ground as a result of the intense friction on the surface of the tires as it slid forward to a dead stop.

The first impulse of the on-lookers was "What the Sam Hill is the matter with that fellow?" The driver was soon able to explain his haste which was occasioned by his having to meet an ambulance from Lincoln, bringing a pulmotor to Weeping Water for use in an attempt to revive the 12-year-old son of Leslie Miles, who had been smothered underneath an avalanche of corn.

The ambulance had not yet arrived and the attention of pedestrians was attracted to the direction from which it should come. Suddenly it came dropping over the hills at a tremendous speed.

The pulmotor and two attendants were transferred to the Buick and away they sped on their way to Weeping Water.

All efforts had failed to save the child and nothing had been spared—it was a race with death in which death was the victor. But everybody concerned had the satisfaction of knowing that all in the power of human endeavor had been done to save the life of the little son.

Harvey Phillips drove the Buick and it can truthfully be said that the car showed his excellent speed and endurance. The trip from Weeping Water to Elmwood was made in exactly twelve minutes.—Elmwood Leader-Echo.
