Attorney for Plaintiffs.

Vice-President Coolidge has gone south to rest, not being aware apparently that it always has been the custom for vice-presidents to do their resting after taking office.

"Well, we weren't the only ones who robbed the government," says a Pennsylvania coal operator, in effect. Which isn't much of a defense, but it compares favorably enough with the excuses put forward by other robbers of the government.

Presumably every retired congressman feels that if he had just had one more term in office, the task of repairing human nature and overcoming the laws of gravity would have here finished up abuse here finished and forty three daths and the deformance in the south of the part of the down?

Three hundred and forty three death sentences were carried out in the custom of vice-presidents to do their resting after taking office.

George Reed, Weeping Water Man Now in Missionary Work in Dark Continent, Writes Old Friends

The following extracts are taken from a letter written to G. L. Spohn of Weeping Water by George Reed, well known Nebraskan who is now in the missionary work of the Methodist church on the dark continent and who is well known to a large circle of friends in Plattsmouth and vicinity where he has often visited. The letter of Mr. Reed is reprinted from the Weeping Water Republi-

"I am spending a month in this old town, Timbuctoo, on the edge of o be an important town as it was vans that came across the desert from North Africa bringing merchandise from Europe and Salt from the desert, and the traders from the bringing grain, gold, slaves, etc. That is all past now. Slavery with railroads and river steamers bring merchandise instead of camels. Once a year the Salt caravan comes, when there are five to seven thousand camels here with their wild looking drivers. The market place now is 'll of these men, as they are gathering here for the out bound journey As the peace anniversary, the 11th there were races, among them a camel race-you and especially Richard and Beatrice would have been much interested in it-the dark-skinned bushy haired men of
