Protecting Your Family

Keeping the wolf from your door is often taken too figuratively. But it is not an idle joke, to be ridiculed or ignored.

To keep the wolf from your door requires weapons more powerful than implements of war. It requires a defense that cannot be bought or borrowed—it is gained through practice of thrift.

To save is to insure yourself and your family protection.

Every man owes himself and his family the protection of a savings account in a good substantial bank such as this one. There are other ways in which we can help you protect your family. Investigate.

TAKE IT FROM THEM!

A few weeks ago we have received the following letter from Franklin Mine, Michigan: "I thank you sincerely for your remedies. For many years I have been sick and gave up all hope to regain my health. But as soon as I began to take Triner's Bitter Wine, I felt that this was the very remedy for me and now I have totally recovered. And my wife who had suffered from rheumatism for ten years also got rid of this torture after having used two and half bottles of Triner's Liniment. Therefore, I recommend Triner's remedies to everybody. Yours, Philip Copp." Here you have the facts. If you are in need of a reliable remedy, take it from these two patients who are now in the best of health and warmly recommend what had helped them in such a splendid way. Triner's Bitter Wine has no equal in case of stomach troubles like poor appetite, constipation, headaches, general weakness, etc., and Triner's Liniment is an excellent remedy for rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, all sprains, swellings, etc. But ask your druggist or dealer in medicines only for Triner's remedies and refuse all imitations.—Joseph Triner Company, 1333-45 S. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

James Terryberry of near Louisville, was here today for a few hours looking after some matters of business and visiting with his many friends in the county seat.

DANGER IN GIVING TREATS IS COSTLY

Must Know Whether Moonshine is Poisonous—Reckless Distribution of Stuff Makes One Liable

In giving Lawrence Thiede, Adams county youth convicted of involuntary manslaughter, a new trial, the supreme court does not give him much hope for a favorable judgment the next time he appears, if again convicted by a jury. Incidentally the court emphasizes the danger that lies in men in possession of homemade or other kinds of brew distributing it among their presumed friends.

Thiede was one of the group of young men and girls who partook freely of some brew Thiede had made. As a result of drinking some of it Julius Kroll, one of the party, died. Thiede was convicted in the court below of involuntary manslaughter, and his attorney appealed, contending primarily that no information for murder in any degree can lie where a person gives another a drink of intoxicating liquor and the latter voluntarily swallows it.

The supreme court says that it cannot go so far as to say that giving another a drink, an act prompted largely by the spirit of good fellowship, although prohibited by law, could ever, by any resulting consequences, be converted into the crime of manslaughter; but where, by reason of its extreme potency or poisonous ingredients, it is dangerous to use as an intoxicating beverage, the drinking of which causes direct personal injury other than as an ordinary intoxicant does, the case is different. There the question of neglect enters, and if a person knows or should know of its dangerous character, the act becomes one of recklessness, an indifference to results, and this may constitute manslaughter.

The court says that Thiede cannot plead ignorance of its effect. He had seen how the stuff, afterwards shown to have contained 57 per cent of alcohol, had acted on two others in the morning, and yet in the evening he had given it to the others.

Where Thiede escaped having his conviction affirmed was that the trial court erred when it told the jury that if defendant furnished the liquor and the liquor caused the death, it should convict him. The court should have included and submitted the question of recklessness.

D. C. West of Nehawka, was in the city yesterday for a short time attending to some business matters of importance and visiting with his friends.
