FLOOD DANGER NO LONGER MENACING

Platte River at This Point is at a Standstill and It Looks Like Danger of High Water is Passed.

The residents and owners of the lowlands along the river bottoms east of the city are feeling somewhat easier today as to the flood situation, as the Platte is now getting down toward normal and the high water which filled the stream to within a foot of the bank last Sunday night, has receeded several feet and now it seems probable that the worst of the flood danger has been passed by in this locality.

It was thought at first that the flood waters of the Platte emptying into the Missouri at this point might cause the overflow of the lowlands between this city and the mouth of the Platte, but this has not so far materialized and every indication is that it is now that the land is safe from the present high water at least.

For the past three seasons the crops on the lowlands have been damaged by the high water and the residents feel that this year they are going to have a chance to secure at least partial returns on their crops.

WILL VISIT EUROPE

From Monday's Daily.

Yesterday, C. B. Schlicher and wife of Omaha were here visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller south of this city, parents of Mrs Schlicher. The visit was in the nature of a farewell as Mr. and Mrs. Schlicher are leaving today for New York and from where they sail for Europe for a tour of several months duration. They expect to spend the greater part of the time in visiting the war devastated areas of France and Belgium and will take in the many points that have become famous in history during the world war in which the allied troops defeated the Central powers. The trip is one of the greatest interest and Mr. and Mrs. Schlicher are looking forward with pleasure to the tour over the interesting places in the old world.

Smith, well known residents of the Rock Bluffs vicinity. The newly weds will make their home in that locality.

FIGHT LAST NIGHT IS VERY DISAPPOINTING

DeBray, Canadian Champion, Proves Fizzle Against Fast Louisville Heavyweight.

From Tuesday's Daily.

The day of fizzles is at hand. For instance there are fizzle firecrackers, fizzle sky rockets and fizzle Roman candles, to say nothing of the "fifty-seven" other varieties of Fourth of July joy producers. The former prove vexing to the juveniles and the latter to the grown-ups. Last night at Omaha, however, there was a fizzle boxing card that proved equally vexing to the five thousand fans who had paid their money to see the show.

Andy Schmader, Louisville heavyweight, was one of the principles, but it was through no fault of his that the match proved disappointing. George DeBray and his 200 pounds of fat proved the big fizzle of the go and the match went about one-half of a round, in which time Andy, who has been training hard and was in the pink of condition, knocked DeBray down twice and the big Canadian stretched his length out on the canvas twice again without any help from Schmader.

Big—That's All

DeBray, who was advertised as the champion of all Canada, was big and that is about all that can be said about him. And you know the old saying, "The bigger they come, the harder they fall."

There was no fight to it. Andy just slipped him an easy "feeler" and the big "tub" went down for a count of six. He was up on his feet again and without hitting a blow Schmader rushed him to the ropes for another "fall down." By some magic DeBray found his way back into the center of the ring and without any assistance from Andy he tripped and then had the nerve to stay down for a count of five. The two then came together at the edge of the ring and DeBray ducked only to receive a hit on the back of the neck and go down again. While the referee was counting him out, the Canuck's seconds threw the towel into the ring and ended the affair for the bored spectators.

No Fault of Andy's

The fact that the fight was a fizzle is in no sense the fault of Schmader, who had been led to believe his opponent was a whirlwind with the padded mitts and who has trained hard for several weeks and is now in such condition that it would be a pleasure to see him go up against some of the top notchers of the country. When he was declared winner last night without scarcely hitting a single blow, no one in the auditorium was more dumbfounded than he, for it is his ambition to meet some of the top-notchers. Unless he is given that opportunity his manager will find box office receipts falling off to a great extent.

Entire Bill Disappointing

The preliminaries at last night's show were mediocre, the semi-windup ended sadly and the main bout was a fizzle. The best preliminary was between Jack Gates and Kid French, which went six rounds to a draw. In the semi-windup Navy Bostan and Jimmie Delaney stood toe to toe for six rounds, but in the seventh Bostan claimed a foul. He was examined by a physician and the fight awarded to him.

A Genuine Fighter

The great improvement in Andy's fighting ability in the past six months makes his friends more than anxious to see him matched with some good man, where he will have opportunity to demonstrate his prowess in the art of fisticuffs. It is earnestly to be hoped the coming fight between Schmader and Bob Roper, scheduled for July 4th at the auditorium in Omaha will materialize, despite the dodging tactics of the Omaha promoters who seem to be trying to slip over a cheap bill. It takes money to import real fighters, but the public won't stand for such impositions as that of last night.

TWO HISTORIC REMINISCENCES.

Gentius, king of Illyria, was vanquished by the Romans in 168 B. C. An herb was named for him, gentian, whose bitter root is employed in medicine since time immemorial. It belongs with cascare segrada and other herbs to the ingredients of Triner's Bitter Wine, the most reliable remedy for poor appetite, constipation, headache and other stomach troubles. Angelica is another old acquaintance. Its bitter root was used for gases in the stomach and intestines by the ancients. Emperor Charles IV., who ruled gloriously in Bohemia in the 14th century, placed a great confidence in this remedy, and because he believed that the angelica growing in Bohemia was the best, it was forwarded to him when he made his often long journeys. It is today the main ingredient of Triner's Angelica Bitter Tonic, a remedy which braces up the nerves and builds up sapped health. Try these Triner's remedies, you can get them at all druggists and dealers in medicines.
