

Suits of Divergent Lines

WHERE there are rumors, creeping and flying about, that Fashion has resolutely turned her back on everything but long and full skirts, there are also signs that a revolt against her new ruling is brewing. The very short and very narrow skirt is no more, but it is not to be succeeded by skirts going to the other extreme, for street wear at least. This is a case of self-determination for American women and the long skirt is an abomination on the street.

The snappy suit in black and white shepherd's check at the left is built on entirely different lines, more familiar and more graceful. It has at least an even chance with its competitor for success. These checked suits are shown in several quiet two-color combinations, as brown and blue, brown and beige, blue and gray and so on, and these darker colors are practical for winter as well as summer wear. The suit pictured has a straight skirt, wide enough for comfort and long enough for style. Its businesslike mannish lines follow those of the figure vaguely. It has revers and crescent-shaped pockets bound with braid and fastens at the waistline with two link buttons.

Sports and Outdooring Hats

IN HATS, as in suits, the styles designed for sports wear were the forerunners of others that have a wider field of usefulness, but preserve the smartness and informality of sport models. No better word has been discovered for describing millinery of this sort than "outdooring" hats. They are simply a combination of sport and tailored ideas that make the most adaptable of millinery and the most comfortable and durable as well. The sport hat, pure and simple, is indeed simple, but the outdooring hat often only makes believe to be simple, its making is sometimes an intricate piece of work.

Italian is turned upward about the brim edge and has a crown of taffeta silk with circular piece at the center and two scant puffs about the side crown. It is trimmed with a ribbon about the crown with flat tailored brim at the back and front.

LEGION MEN LIKE HIS TYPE

State Adjutant of Minnesota Made Numerous Efforts Before Accepted for War Service.

Horace G. Whitmore began serving under Pershing early. He was holding down a pivot in the cadet battalion at the University of Nebraska in 1895 when the future general was a commander and a staff there. Incidentally Mr. Whitmore and General Pershing formed a friendship on the campus which endures to the present day and which found expression after the armistice, when the C-in-C, inspecting the One Hundred and Fifty-first field artillery in Germany, left a crowd of generals, walked over to a stubby little first sergeant, thrust out his hand and said:

"Whitmore, I am glad to see you." Whitmore was born in Dayton, O., in 1873; was brought up on a farm in Nebraska, and graduated from the state university there in 1895.

He was a contractor in Minneapolis in 1917, when he presented himself for admission to the first series of officers' training camps. He was rejected as being overweight. Back to the farm went Whitmore. In four weeks he took off 20 pounds and asked to be admitted to the second series of training camps, but the surgeon said: "Too fat to fight." Another examiner said: "Too old."

Whitmore went from recruiting office to recruiting office until he became a private in Battery B, One Hundred and Fifty-first field artillery, Forty-second division. He went overseas with the outfit and served with it through the war, participating in every engagement in which the Rain-bows took part.

When discharged he was induced to become state adjutant of the American Legion for Minnesota. He has done much for the development of the Legion in the Northwest. Mr. Whitmore recently resigned from that position to accept the directorship of a company formed for the manufacture of an automobile accessory device which he invented.

WAS BORN UNDER LUCKY STAR

Indianapolis Legion Man Sustained Twenty-Six Wounds During His Service in War.

Wounded 26 times and glad it wasn't 27, William N. Evans, Indianapolis, Ind., still believes he was born under a lucky star.

He walked into national headquarters of the American Legion the other day seeking "just any kind of work that will keep my mind occupied." He said he was an overseas veteran. "I'm still a bit weak," he explained. "I was wounded."

When pressed for details he owned up to 26 wounds in four major offensives. A job was made for him, clerical work that would "keep his mind occupied" but which would be consistent with 26 wounds.

Evans was a private in the Twenty-eighth infantry, First division. A machine gun got him at Cantigny, a bayonet came next at Soissons; he was struck by shrapnel in the St. Mihiel push and in the Argonne a one-pounder shell hit him a glancing blow on the chin before it exploded. When it went off almost under him 22 pieces of shrapnel peppered his body. He remained on the battlefield 26 hours before he was picked up.

"But I'm happy just the same," Evans says. "This job keeps me from being a loafer and pays just enough with my government compensation for me to get married. I guess I was born lucky."

Benefit Performance.

For some time the benign old gentleman sat watching the novice in his vain attempts to land a fish. Finally the angler was reduced to his last worm and still no catch.

"Cheer up, son," said the old gentleman. "They're biting well for you at any rate."

"No, they ain't," retorted the other aggrievedly. "They're bitin' for their own personal benefit, that's what they are."—American Legion Weekly.
