LOUISVILLE BOXER BREAKS ARM IN FIRST

ANDY SCHMADER FORCED TO RETIRE AND MARPLES WINS A TECHNICAL K. O.

From Thursday's Daily. The opening bill of the boxing game in this city under the new state law, promoted by the local American Legion post, was held last night at the Airborne theatre and the show presented was one to delight the lovers of the manly art and good fast preliminaries marked the go from start to finish.

The main event of the evening—the ten round bout between Andy Schmader of Louisville and Jim Marples of Chicago was rather disappointing to the fans on account of the accident suffered by Andy in the opening round when he fractured his right arm in a blow on the head of the Chicago heavyweight.

The fight program was supervised by John Kilmartin of Omaha, boxing inspector and among the officials attending the match was Lum Doyle, of Lincoln, state boxing commissioner.

From Thursday's Daily. The opening of the bill was the preliminary between Joe Smetana, former sailor and Young Galloway, an ex-soldier, both local boys, and this served as a fitting curtain raiser for the excellent program.

The second preliminary of six rounds was one that was fast and furious and in the opening Dick Roscoe, of Omaha, who was the opponent of George Schmader of Louisville, gave evidences of skill and generalship, but in the second the Louisville boy began to loosen the stiff joints on his opponent that shook his confidence and in the succeeding rounds George developed some splendid work that showed he had the Omaha lad in a bad hole and in the third Roscoe was forced to quit under the force of the rain of blows that was handed him by the Louisville boy.

The semi-final between Stanley McBride of Chicago and Harry Kinnear of South Omaha, was one of the best that has been seen in this part of the state, and the two young scrappers gave a good account of themselves in the six fast and furious rounds of the bout.

The unfortunate outcome of the boxing match has been greatly regretted by the hosts of friends here in the city and many who have been great boosters for the Louisville fighter.
