BIDS POLITICS FAREWELL IN A BRIEF ADDRESS

LIEUT. GOVERNOR BARROWS IS TO REJOIN NEWSPAPER RANKS IN SPRING

The only announcement from the state house Thursday that may or may not cause a sensation to run up and down the political spinal column was the unqualified statement from Lieutenant Governor Pelham A. Barrows that he will not be a candidate for a third term in the office he now occupies. As the constitutional prohibition against a state officer running for any other state office during the term for which he is elected, Mr. Barrows is safely out of the way of political preferment, so far as state offices go for the balance of 1921 and the whole of 1922. Mr. Barrows has counted himself out. Nobody has done it for him. After 1922 fades away Mr. Barrows will be at liberty to start after and larriat any state office he may pick out of the bunch, but he talks as one who has had enough. He proposes to go back to his first love, the newspaper business.

Mr. Barrows enjoys the distinction of holding seven different offices, none of which pays a salary. Only recently he was elected to office in the Lancaster county humane society, but came within an ace of being impeached because he got up at midnight and threw bricks at some cats which were disturbing the peace in his back yard. He got out of the scrape by saying he believed from the noise the cats were making they were dying by inches and thinking that was too slow he proposed to be humane and chase them into the alley and there make them die by the yard.

Mr. Barrows was elected lieutenant governor twice. The first time he was elected partly because he is a direct descendent of the Pilgrims and partly because he was a homesteader and pioneer in Boone county, Nebraska. There was an indirect appeal because his ancestors had led a hard life on the rock bound coast of Massachusetts and he himself had been a homesteader in Nebraska. "Let's give him something easy for once in his life," was the slogan, so he was elected lieutenant governor. One of the duties of this office, as is well known, is for the occupant to sit around and wait for the governor to die or be impeached, or in the governor's absence to serve in his stead for little or nothing.

The recent constitutional convention discussed the proposition of abolishing the office of lieutenant governor and some other state offices, but it had a vision in the night, changed its mind and the people still have the constitutional right to elect eighteen state officers, including seven judges of the supreme court, but not including congressmen and United States senators, legislators, district judges, county officers and city officers, nor five regents of the university.

"I am not a candidate for a third term," said Lieutenant Governor Barrows. "It is a business principle that a man should be retained in his position because of the knowledge he has of the business, but it seems that there is a sentiment in Nebraska that two terms in one office is enough. While I have no objection to anyone being a candidate for a third term, I will not do so. I have had all the honors, enssing and criticism that usually goes with the office, and I will leave it well satisfied. I propose to quit when my record for running for office is good. I shall go back to newspaper work in the near future—in the spring. My term of office as commander in chief of the Sons of Veterans will end October 1, and then I will be in a position to accept something else. One week from today I shall leave for the national encampment of the Sons of Veterans. I will stop on the way to speak at Kansas City and St. Louis.

This seemed like a cold and formal quitting of the political game, so newspaper reporters asked Mr. Barrows if he is still a republican, or if he had any last word for his fellow office holders.

"I will continue to take an interest in politics," he said, "and if I can be of any service in the coming campaign, I will be glad to do what I can. I am still wild for the grand old party of Taft and Roosevelt and for the mistakes of some of our office holders I am not responsible."

C. G. Mayfield, wife and daughter, Edith, returned last Friday from a two weeks' auto trip to Two Harbors, Minn., where they visited with their son, C. V. Mayfield and family. Clem owns a fine farm three miles from the city of Two Harbors overlooking Lake Superior. He is erecting a $7,000 residence and is doing most of the work himself. In fact he saved his own lumber cut from his own timber and when completed his home will be as near home made as it is possible to get it. The building is 34x49 1/2, with full basement.

The Manley schools opened last week, September 5, with the usual good attendance. Mrs. A. H. Fumble is again principal and Miss Clara Triby, of Gretna, is assistant as last year. There were five little beginners this year. They were Mary Owens, Ramona Frost, James Brockenkrieder, William Keckler and Frank Bergman. Several from Manley are attending the Louisville high school. They are Leda, Creda and Myrtle Fleischman, Alice and Arnold Harms, Rollin and Ralph Coon. Th Manley young people who enter the High school are always well prepared to go on with their studies, having laid a good foundation in the grades and never having any trouble in keeping up with their class.

An east bound freight train on the Rock Island was wrecked at Meadow station north of this city last Friday morning, eleven cars going into the ditch. Six cars loaded with fine stock from the state fair enroute home to Iowa were wrecked. Three head of cattle were killed. The horses escaped injury except one race horse which was injured about the back. There were two cars loaded with sugar in the wreck and sugar covered the ground like snow. The wreck was caused by the heavy rain washing away the supports of a small culvert. The engine passed over in safety but as the cars followed the culvert broke down and the trucks dropped down, the cars going into the ditch. Three men riding in the cars with the stock miraculously escaped with but slight bruises and cuts.

SENATE COMMITTEE FINISHES REVISION

Will Report Measure Repealing the Excess Profits Tax and Reducing the Surtax

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—Revision of the house tax bill virtually was completed today by the senate finance committee, which under the present agreement will report to the senate a measure having these outstanding proposals:

Repeal of the excess profits tax as of next January 1, as proposed by the house.

Reduction of the income surtax rates from a maximum of 65 per cent to 32 per cent, effective next January 1.

An increase in the corporation income tax from 10 per cent to 16 per cent, effective next January 1, instead of 12 1/2 per cent as proposed by the house.

Repeal of the corporation capital stock tax as of next year.

Retention of present rates on express packages and oil by pipe lines; and retention of the taxes on freight and passengers for the calendar year 1922, only half the present rates of 3 per cent and 8 per cent, respectively. The house proposed repeal of all these taxes as of next January 1.

The loss in revenue thru the rearrangement of the surtax rates was estimated by treasury experts at $18,000,000, making the total annual loss in individual income taxes $178,000,000, including $90,000,000 thru reduction of the maximum surtax rates and $7,000,000 thru increased exemptions to heads of families and on account of dependents.

Chairman Penrose announced today that in offering the bill in the senate he would ask that it be made the unfinished business so as to bring early consideration. He was of the opinion that its passage would not be long delayed. After the senate acts the bill goes to conference for the composing of differences between the senate and house.
