NAVAL RESERVE IS GREATLY REDUCED

Principal Object Being the Cutting Off of Retainer Pay of $12 per Year—Affects Local Men

The naval reserve forces in Nebraska and Iowa have been cut approximately 2,800 men through the automatic release of these men from the naval reserve in compliance with an order recently issued by Secretary of the Navy Denby, according to an estimate made by Commander D. C. Duell, senior reserve officer for Nebraska and Iowa. Classes two, three, four and five are wiped out by the order, according to Commander Duell.

Members of the four classes abolished will be given an opportunity to disenroll and be transferred without pay to class six, the volunteer section, Commander Duell announces.

"This will enable the men to retain their identity and rank in the reserve," Commander Duell states.

"They will, however, be enrolling in the volunteer forces, lose the retainer pay, which in the majority of cases amounts to $12 a year."

The order affects a number of Plattsmouth navy men who continued on the reserve following their discharge, and who have been receiving the $12 per year retainer pay, although never called for the two weeks' mid-summer training. It was originally planned each should take.
