REVIVES CAPITAL PUNISHMENT FIGHT

Unjust Application of Perjured Testimony and Circumstantial Evidence Seen in Ince Film.

The widely-discussed question of capital punishment and its abolition has been revived in many quarters by the appearance of Thomas H. Ince's stirring melodrama, "Mother O' Mine," which comes to the Paramount next Friday and Saturday.

For more than half a century the abolition of capital punishment has been an issue in American public life. Several states have dispensed with the death sentence as the supreme penalty for crime, and one or two of these states have returned to the use of the electric chair as the only effective means of both punishing and diminishing murder.

In "Mother O' Mine" the abolitionists point out a striking example of the danger of the state assuming to take the life of its major criminals.

Robert Sheldon, the leading character of the drama, falls into an altercation with his employer, the results of the latter's vicious slandering of the boy's mother. A thrilling fight follows in which the elder man manages to get a revolver from the drawer of a table. The boy, fighting for his life, forces the gun from his employer's hand, and, falling to the floor, it is accidentally discharged, fatally wounding its owner.

The only witness to the affray is the mistress of the slain man, who, in spite of her waywardness, is sincerely devoted to him. She promises to avenge his death, and on the witness stand perjures herself, stating that the boy was the murderer, thereby securing his conviction and sentence to the electric chair.

Mother Intervenes

There is apparently no hope for the condemned lad. His mother, however, intervenes and her determination and loyalty draw a confession from the guilty woman. Even then, with but a few hours of execution, only the resourcefulness of the district attorney and a mad ride thru a raging storm effect the boy's release as he is strapped to the death chair.

The decriers of capital punishment who have seen the Ince drama advance this episode, which has been duplicated in real life when circumstantial evidence has brought men to the gallows, as an argument in support of their demand for doing away with the electric chair and the gallows.

There are many instances on record, they declare, where innocent men and women have suffered the penalty when subsequent events proved their innocence, and they argue that "Mother O' Mine" is a vivid dramatic example of the fallacy of the system now generally in vogue.

HARDING WILL PUT 'ASSOCIATION' UP TO CONFERENCE

Washington, Nov. 29.—President Harding's suggestion for a continuing conference of nations is expected by administration officials to become the subject of formal discussion before the present conference ends.

It was indicated in official quarters today that although the president had no intention of complicating the Far Eastern and armaments negotiations by bringing the subject before the conference at present, he fully expected that after these questions are out of the way there will be a serious effort for an agreement for future similar meetings.

As a result of foreign comment on the president's suggestion, it was also declared by an administration spokesman that there was no intention that any "association" of nations resulting from these conferences should become in any way a rival of the league of nations.

The president's position was said to be that the new "association" should not have the attitude of an "undermining agency" for the league.

GETTING SHOPS OUT OF REACH OF LABOR BOARD

New York, Nov. 29.—Reports that several of the large eastern railroads have leased their repair shops to outside companies or were considering plans to conclude such leases were confirmed by railroad executives.

It was explained that the desire to effect greater economies in operation, together with the recent controversies over rules and working conditions had prompted the roads to relinquish control of their shops, thus removing repair work from the jurisdiction of the railroad labor board and the established wage scale which the latter insists shall be paid.
