DEATH OF GOOD WOMAN INSPIRES POETIC SKETCH

Biography of Mrs. Amanda Parr, Mother of Mrs. Brendel, Who Passed Away in Indiana.

Mrs. Amanda Parr was the daughter of Oliver Cromwell and wife, and was born June 17th, 1832, near Bowling Green, Clay county, Indiana, and departed this life February 8th, at 3:15 a. m., at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Etta Shelby of Lebanon.

On July 29th, 1849, she was united in marriage to Benjamin Gurney, who only lived about sixteen months after their marriage. To this union was born one son, Benjamin M., who is still living.

She was again united in marriage January 21, 1854, to Jacob Parr, with whom she lived until his death June 1st, 1887. To this union were born nine children, Jane, Sarah, Jacob O., Josephine, Cordelia, Etta, Nelson J., Ida and Maggie.

The deceased are Sarah, who departed this life in 1888; Mrs. Jane Barker, June 21st, 1902; Mrs. Maggie Nicholson in 1905, and Mrs. Ida Baker in 1916.

Those who are left to feel their loss are B. M. Gurney and Nelson J. Parr of this vicinity; Jacob O. Parr, of Sheridan; Mrs. Josephine Brendel of Nebraska; Mrs. Cordelia Johns of Colfax and Mrs. Etta Shelby of Lebanon; one step-daughter, Mrs. Lucy A. Jones; twenty-six grandchildren; fifteen great grandchildren; two brothers, William Cromwell of Clay county and Albert Cromwell of Lebanon; one sister, Mrs. Jerusha Worley of this vicinity and Mrs. Emma Cox of near Terra Haute, besides many other relatives and a large circle of friends.

She became a member of the Big Springs M. E. church back in its earliest history and since that time she and members of her family have been among its strongest supporters. She was never loud in her profession, but her daily life shone with that brilliancy that is backed by a true Christian character.

Some little time back grandma had told her granddaughter, Mrs. Edith Shelby Derry, that when it should come her time to leave this world, she wanted Ma Myers to write her obituary. And again last Monday before her death while talking with the family about the arrangements for her funeral, she again expressed her desire. Mrs. Myers was told of the fact and has responded with the following brief biographical sketch also:

Early on February the eighth, Grandma passed away, leaving her earthly home, to dwell in that land of no more day.

Here on the shore, she'd been waiting To hear the dip of the oar, And to see the Master's boatman Coming to carry her o'er.

Over the tide to the Beulah land, Where all is wondrous bright; And Christ, we're told, is the light thereof, And ne'er comes the shades of night;

Where Jesus has gone a home to prepare, For all who are faithful and true, For he said, "It is needful that I go away, That you may come there, too."

But, as I write, my mind goes back, And I am lost in thought; And I try to picture her early life, The time of which I know naught.

I fancy I see the log cabin home, I round which the forest grew, For grandmother lived in the early days, When this beautiful country was new,

And she was queen of this cabin home And ruled with the hand of love, And no queen sitting on a throne Could more of a lady prove.

She had time to go to church, Or help a neighbor in need; And was ever ready to care for the sick,

Or the cry of the orphan heard, Her family kept increasing, 'Till the number grew to be Fourteen children and steps-children.

So grandma was busy, you see; For in those days, home a factory was Where flax and wool were spun, And when a garment was finished, You also had seen it begun.

'E'er this, the home nest had grown too small, And the parents saw that they Must build a more commodious home To fill the needs of the day.

So they built a house on the old homestead, One among the best, And it still stands to speak of them, After they've gone to rest.

I now press memory's button And vividly I can see The family coming here to church Along with you and me.

How the parents spoke of the love of God, That in their beams dwelt; And earnestly prayed for his keeping power, As on their knees they knelt.

Some of the children had older grown And married here and there, And drifted into homes of their own, Away from mother's care.

But never away from mother's love, For that was grounded too deep, And over their every action, She loving watch would keep.

Some earth ties too had been broken, Four had been called away; And their memory was cherished in the home, While they in the church-yard lay.

But 'twas in eighteen, eighty-seven, That grandmother stood the test; When her loving companion was called away,

And quietly laid to rest, Grandmother now was lonely, And sometimes, dark seemed the day;

But she busied her hands with loving deeds, And passed the time away, Soon all of the children had homes of their own, And grandmother lived with them, there—

And carried away earth's beauty— Making us willing to go, The years of nineteen two and nine, Took two daughters away; And in nineteen sixteen another went Leaving but six today.

And they did all within their powers, White with their teeth could stay, And now they're strewn her bed with flowers,

Since she must go away, But today, as we lay her gently away; Let not her example go too, For that is the legacy of her life,

That she would leave with you; That by it you may profit, to say, And guard your steps with care; And be prepared to meet her, In that bright home "over there."
