W. J. Partridge, better known as the dynamite king of Cass county, was over today from Weeping Water and made a call at the court house.

HE KNEW SOMETHING ABOUT HER PAST

A Secret He Dare Not Tell—Hence She Defied Him Until—Well It's a Wonderful Story.

She came up the road with a bundle under her arm—some clothing, a few strips of ribbon and a baby's sock.

At the Squire's place she stopped to ask for work. Slender little thing—pretty too—but very hot and tired. A strip of linen she used for a garter was chafing her leg, and there was a blister on the left heel.

She asked Squire Bartlett for work—any kind of work, for she wanted a home more than anything else. He wanted to know what her folks were and where she came from—then told her he didn't have anything for her. He was that type of man, very strict and positive, and running everything, only his wife knew how to make him change his mind without knowing how to do it.

She did this time. The girl said her name was Anna and they took her in.

They had a neighbor—a wealthy young man on his country estate.

Well, it was amazing the way Anna improved in appearance and beauty in a rather delicate way and the old Squire got as fond of her as his children.

But he didn't know his son, David, fell in love with Anna the first time he saw her. And apparently she did too. One of those cases where we had or hope to have just one man for one woman out of all the millions. The Squire wanted David to marry his distant niece, Kate, and Sanderson came around to call on Kate. When he saw Anna, he recognized her, and he told her to get out of there. He knew something about her past. She wouldn't go—fought him like the sturdy little woman she was and he didn't dare tell.

But, when Martha, the mosquito-tongued gossip found out, what a scene she made. She drove them all into the most amazing situation ever known about—a scene that made the Herald man in New York say, "My hair stood on my head, and I stood in my chair."

It's something you'll never forget as long as you live for it is the greatest climax the over-surprising genius of Griffith has yet brought to the films. You'll hear about it in "Way Down East," when it comes to the Parmelee four days next week, commencing Monday.

VERY DELIGHTFUL MUSICALS

From Saturday's Daily.

Yesterday afternoon Mesdames E. H. Wescott, A. J. Beeson and Wm. Baird entertained at a most charming musical at the beautiful Baird home on Main street and at which there were present some forty invited guests. The program was one of the rarest charm and participated in by a number of the most gifted of the Plattsmouth people as well as a number of out of town guests. Among those from out of the city participating in the musicals were Mrs. Charles G. Beeson of Springfield, Ohio, who is gifted with a voice of remarkable sweetness and power and her vocal numbers were much enjoyed. Mrs. Roy Cole of Mynard, also gave a piano solo that was such as to give her ample opportunity of demonstrating her skill at the piano. Mrs. A. D. Caldwell, who is always a favorite with the Plattsmouth public, gave one of her artistic violin numbers and Miss Alice Louise Wescott a pleasing and novel whistling selection that was much enjoyed.

After the delights of the program very appropriate and delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses.

A NEW DRUMMER

From Friday's Daily.
C. C. Burbridge, the drummer of the Black and White Melody boys, was taking a day off yesterday from his work in the Burlington shops, as the result of a hurried visit that the stork had paid to his home Wednesday night and the kindly old bird left in the care of the family a fine little son and heir. This is the first son in the family and the rejoicing is accordingly great by both the parents as well as the three little sisters.

Whooping Cough

This is a very dangerous disease, particularly to children under five years of age, but when no paregoric, codeine or other opiate is given, is easily cured by giving Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Most people believe that it should run its course, not knowing that the time is very much shortened, and that there is little danger from the disease when this remedy is given. It has been used in many epidemics of whooping cough with pronounced success. It is safe and pleasant to take. Weyrich & Hadraba.

A FINE NEW SON

From Friday's Daily.
The home of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Finder is rejoicing over the fact that a fine son and heir made his appearance there Wednesday evening and announced his intention of becoming one of the household in the future. This is the first son and consequently the rejoicing is great with the members of the family.
