AN INFLAMMABLE SIGN
 Today's most important news is that the railroads are moving as many cars of freight as during the great business boom of 1919.
 It is a remarkable showing, for the coal strike has reduced freight movement 110,000 cars a week.
 If coal shipments were uninterrupted now, as they were in 1919, freight traffic would be more than a seventh bigger than during the boom.
 It is important news, might encourage for freight loadings show how much is being produced, how much sold.

WHO'LL BE THE VILLIAN NOW?
 Representatives of the Chinese, Mexican and Abyssinian governments have protested against the casting of their countrymen as villains in moving picture dramas. This is most embarrassing to dramatists and directors. A film without a villain is unthinkable. And he must be the right kind of villain; he must have the manner villainous—the cunning leer, the stealthy movements and the furtive expression. To picture him otherwise would be inviting the chance of mistaking him for the hero.
 If scenario writers looked around in any of our large cities, and perhaps even in the small ones, they no doubt could find excellent villains; but it would take some imagination and inventiveness to make their villain open and apparent. And so our dramatist adopts the easier way of casting foreigners for such parts. But it is decidedly unfair.
 The average theatre goer has little opportunity for intimate acquaintance with foreign peoples, and so when time and time again he sees Mexicans and Chinese cast in the role of villains, he is likely to come to the conclusion quite unconsciously that these foreigners run easily into all kinds of devilry. This result is the more natural since in their stage makeup the villainous appearance of such characters is always emphasized.

"THE MAN ON THE BOX" IS A BIG SUCCESS

PLAY PRESENTED BY CLASS OF 1922 ONE THAT GAVE CAST REAL OPPORTUNITY.

CAST GIVES FINE RENDITION
Their Closeness to Detail and Realistic Characters Shows Great Ability on Their Part.

From Wednesday's Daily.
 Choosing the dramatization of the novel of Harold McGrath, "The Man on the Box," as their class play, the class of 1922 of the Plattsmouth high school gave a most delightful entertainment at the Parmele theatre last evening and one that reflects the greatest credit on everyone of the cast and the director, P. H. Field. This story of comedy, love and a touch of the melodramatic in its composition, was one well suited to the varied talents of the young people of the class and in their parts each done remarkably well and particularly those who were appearing for the first time in an offering of this kind.
 The story in brief deals with the attempt of "Robert Worburton," a dashing young army officer, lately retired, to play a prank on his sister and disguised as a coachman he drives what he supposes is her carriage and discovers at the end of the drive that he has made a mistake and has as his passenger "Betty Annesley," a society belle and there a venture is spiced with a stolen Miss Henderson who had known the coachman that lodges the prankful soldier in the city prison at Washington, D. C. "Charles Henderson," the friend of Bob, and a newspaper man, attempts to secure the mitigation of the offense by the court and failing to succeed "Betty" herself assists the prisoner, as she suspects the identity of the "coachman," to make him pay dear for his trick and after securing his release she compels him to enter her service as a groom and the comedy follows in the situations that arise at the Annesley home at Chevy Chase. Into the growing romance and the fun of the play comes the strain of melodrama in the plot of a Russian spy and count to secure from the impoverished "Col Annesley" the plans to the American coast.
 The success and the successful outcome of the play brings the two lovers together, the plans safe back to the government and everybody happy.
 The role of "Bob Worburton" was taken by Allison Flynn, who made a very romantic lover, and was supported by Miss Lillian Calvert as "Betty" and these young people were all that could be desired in the parts and particularly in the dramatic tenor of the last act as they were their work most appreciated. As "Charles Henderson," the friend of William Matchallo, appeared, and was one of the outstanding features of the play as his work was clever throughout, and was a very finished part. As the stern police court magistrate Otis Triety proved himself a most clever actor and this part was one that would have done credit to a much more experienced actor. In the opening scene Harold Pitt as the police court clerk and Donald Dickson as the police court bailiff were entertaining and Ed Matchallo as "Officer O'Brien" kept the audience in a good humor and was a real Irish cop in every sense of the term. Aside from the leading character of "Betty" the play did not afford the other ladies strong parts but in the roles given them the characters were well taken. Fern Niel appearing as "Mrs. Conway," a friend of "Betty"; Miss Grace Duff as the sister of the unlucky "Bob" and Miss Estelle Lister as the maid of the Annesley family.
 The part of the deep-dyed villain was taken by John Ptak as "Count Karloff" and in this part John made a character that certainly was all that the author could have asked of his creation. Raymond Bookmyer as "Col. Annesley," the unfortunate father of "Betty" and his work showed much study and care on his part. Earl Troop was cast as the French chef and in his part was decidedly of the type and temperament of the most exacting chef that ever stepped from La Belle France. Karl Wulff appeared as "Col. Frank Raleigh" and Harry Dwyer as "William" a stable boy, and completing a cast of more than usual ability for persons as young as these.
 One of the pleasing features of the evening was the program given by the high school orchestra under the direction of Mrs. A. D. Caldwell and which furnished several numbers that aided in making the time most pleasant. The orchestra was composed of Mrs. Caldwell, Miss Margaret Sitzman, Dudley Utter, August Knoffke, violins; Miss Helen Wescott, piano; DeLough Utter, flute; George Schmidtman and Jack Ledgeway, cornets.

IMPROVEMENT VERY SLIGHT
 From Wednesday's Daily.
 The reports from the bedside of Mrs. Albert Fink at Memphis, received here last evening by the members of the family, state that the patient is showing very slight improvement and is only conscious a part of the time. She has, however, been able to take some nourishment during her periods of consciousness and is probably a trifle improved, but the change is so slight as to leave her still in very critical shape.

FUNERAL OF MISS GORDER
 From Wednesday's Daily
 The funeral services of Miss Louise Gorder were held yesterday afternoon at the First Presbyterian church and despite the extremely disagreeable weather conditions there was a very large attendance of the old friends who had known the departed lady during her lifetime and the floral remembrances were unusually beautiful and expressed the sorrow that the occasion had brought to the old friends of the family.
 The pastor, Rev. G. McClusky, spoke very comforting to the members of the family and took as his sermon the long suffering of the departed and the bravery with which she had borne her trials to the last to be washed free of the infirmities of the earth in the blood of the Lamb.
 During the service a quartet composed of Edna Marshall Eaton, Estelle Baird, George L. Farley and L. O. Minor, gave several of the favorite hymns and Mrs. Eaton sang her usually impressive manner.
 The City of Service at the conclusion of the service the cortege took its way to Oak Hill cemetery where the interment was made at the Oak Hill cemetery.

FRIENDS ARE INSISTENT
 From out in the county there emanates the constant report that there will be a petition filed for the re-nomination of Sheriff C. D. Quinton for the office that he has filled for the past seventeen years. The sheriff has not been in the humor to seek the office and his inactivity as to the position has been one of the unknown qualities of the campaign that has worried the ambitions of the other persons who might desire the office and in fact the announcement of his intention not to enter the race would have brought in a deluge of candidates for the position. Just what attitude Sheriff Quinton will assume in the event that the petition is filed remains to be seen. As it is the field is now occupied by three candidates, Raymond Bookmyer, Adolph Geise and Harve Manners as democrats.
