Thresh from the Shock Direct into a Columbian!

Save Stacking Expense and Shrinkage

Grain threshed direct from the shock into a Columbian Metal Grain Bin comes out in better condition than if "sweat in the stack," then improperly stored. The scientific ventilation system of work. None is wasted, destroyed by rust or damaged by weather or fire. No planing expense and loss. Shrinkage is less than 2% as compared to 10% when stored in the open. The difference between 10% and 2% shrinkage on 1,000 bushels of grain will pay for a Columbian of this size in a single season.

Rats Destroy Millions Yearly

A Department of Agriculture test states that more grain is eaten by rats and mice and other wee vermin than is shipped out of this country each year. Two Hundred Million Dollars is the yearly toll of crops and property destroyed by these pests. Starvation is the only effective way to herd them. They cannot get to grain stored in a Columbian Metal Grain Bin nor can they reach your crop in a stack.

Properly Stored Grain Is Banked Cash.

It is more valuable than cash received from the sale of grain at a loss on the prevailing low market. Harvest and stack during the summer. Some one else will store your grain for you at a higher price if you don't. The Columbian Metal Grain Bin provides perfect summer storage at a cost of less than 10¢ per bushel distributed over the many years it will give service.

Improved, Reinforced, Triple Joint and Vertical Corrugated Construction

Sections in the body of a Columbian Metal Grain Bin are joined by a triple flanged joint which forms a four-ply band of steel around the bin every 3 1/2 inches of its height. This and the vertically corrugated side sections combine to make the strongest grain bin available. The roofs of square bins built on a concrete foundation are made of heavy metal, designed throughout to withstand any load placed on them and to resist windstorms when empty. It is anchored to platform or earth. More than 20,000 Columbian Metal Grain Bins have entered farm storage service. Buy early and thresh direct from the shock. Prompt delivery now, but don't delay.

DANGER IN GETTING ON RIGHT OF WAY, SAYS ROAD

Burlington Officials Warn Those Desiring to See Review to Select Safer Place to View It.

The prospect of the attendance of large crowds to witness the review of the Nebraska state troops by Governor McKelvie here on Friday afternoon has caused much apprehension on the part of the Burlington as to parties getting on the right of way of the company just west of the parade grounds.

The company is not particularly worried over the damage to the right of way, but it is a matter of safety to the public that is more pressing, as a large crowd there would provide an opportunity for someone to get injured in the passing of trains along the tracks near where the crowds would have to stand and they are hopeful that the public will realize this danger and omit getting on the right of way.

The hills west of the tracks and the grounds of the camp are perfectly safe spots to see the parade from and those who desire to view it should take advantage of the safe places rather than run the risk attendant upon the use of the right of way.

It was suggested some time ago that this right of way would be a good place to see the parade, but the danger is so great that it will be a better plan to be safe than sorry.
