THE EVENING OF LIFE

Are not my days few? Cease then, and let me alone, that I may take comfort a little, before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness and the shadow of death.—Job x, 20 and 21.

It isn't every pocketbook that has a silver lining.

While travel broadens one it also makes one sharp.

We saw a man on the sidewalk who was up a tree.

Dust clouds are seen on Mars. It may be an election.

Time seems to wear rubber heels, it slips by so easily.

Fault is so easily found the hunting isn't worth while.

The real man is not afraid of work and sometimes does it.

Hunt the bright side. Strikes always reduce income taxes.

Many a fair maiden worries because she is just a fair maiden.

When dad plants onions in the front yard you know who is boss.

A good natured, bad tempered man is allowed to scold more than any other.

The doctors have classified about all the diseases into germ and non-germ diseases except jazz.

Once a woman threw her soup at the waiter. Etiquette book would have prevented this blunder.

Next to raising a family the most troublesome thing in the world is coloring a meerschaum pipe.

It is a great age, when anything and everything can be made out of cotton—even woolen clothes.

If the voice over the telephone grows importantly, it is not the great man, but his secretary.

One nice thing about stopping at a hotel is that you don't have to wash the tub after taking a bath.

Porto Rico continues to let the president know that it could worry along without Gov. E. Mont Rellly if it had to.

Courtesy is the thing which keeps a woman smiling when a departing guest holds the screen door open and lets the flies in.

The straight road may look narrow, but it is the safest and best, and always leads you to a destination worth while.

It is probably untrue—that rumor that Bill Hart's baby wakes up and cries in the night, they give him a couple of revolvers to play with.

Everybody should see that their chimneys and flues are examined and cleaned. Don't wait till cold weather to do it but have it done right now before you set up your stoves.

It probably is fortunate that none of our Sir Oliver Lodges have found a way to communicate with posterity. If they had, we'd be hearing a lot of questions about what became of the plan to relieve posterity from paying part of the expenses of the war.

One of the most depressing features about the Turkish victory is the inevitable reappearance of those references to the sick man of Europe. We suppose there's nothing to be done about it.

"We little dream of the violence that is stored up in the earth under us," says a scientist. Somebody ought to send that to the congressman whose duty it is to check up the tariff bill for final consideration.

The importance of the crusade just launched cannot be over emphasized. If you want to help keep Plattsmouth free from typhoid and other deadly diseases during the fall months, swat the fly every chance you get, and go out of your way to find chances.

About the only place a flivver can succeed in being conspicuous by its absence is on a big speedway.

An advertisement says: "You can play a saxophone for an hour without getting tired." Without who getting tired?

Senator La Follette is reported to be amazed at the size of his majority in Wisconsin. Which reminds us of Louis XV's exclamation, "What have I done to be so loved?"

McAdoo has declared himself as a candidate for president on the democratic ticket, of course, in 1924. Go to it, William, you have millions of friends who are ready to support you.

Each year brings out another bunch of persons with new theories about how coal may best be burned in order to get the most heat from it. It looks as if this winter might be a good one in which to try out all the best sounding theories.

Clemenceau declares that the United States left her allies in the lurch, and says he is coming over here to tell us so. We will all be glad to see the Tiger of France, but we don't want him to start a rough house while he is our guest.

The politicians who have been more or less comfortably and securely maintaining their position on the fence between the labor unions and the public, have some difficulty in keeping their equilibrium since Uncle Sam has espoused the cause of the public.

It is hard to forgive undue pride on the part of another, but that of the new flivver owner, who succeeds in guiding his car into the garage for the first time, without leaving any wheels or fenders hanging on the door, is, generally speaking, pardonable.

It was ever thus: When times are hard and taxes high, the people are going to investigate the cause. In the state of Nebraska, they know right where to point their fingers—in the direction of Samuel R. McKelvie and his administration. The taxes in this state are outrageous, more so than of any other state in the union, according to the population.

With the people of the United States cured of government operation since the war time experience with the railroads, congress is evincing no enthusiasm over the proposal to give the president blanket authority to seize the railroads and mines in the public interest. One Washington correspondent says that the majority in congress has declared a "never again pledge."

Every man and woman have their political right, but when self interest is attached by such enormous taxes as Nebraska farmers and all others are suffering from, politics should cut no figure. The taxpayers demand relief, and the democrats have promised to give it to them and they know that promises made by the democrats will hold good if they are successful at the November election.

Mildred Harris Chaplin was quoted recently as being of the opinion that Lila Lee would be the next Mrs. Charlie Chaplin. But yesterday a coast dispatch said Miss Lee and James Kirkwood had left for the east to be married. We should think most women could manage to keep track of her successors a little better than Mildred does—smacks a bit of carelessness.
