

LEGISLATIVE COMMENT

BY OLE BUCK

A majority of the special joint committee appointed to investigate the condition of the finances of the state made its report Friday evening.

Two house members created a little special interest by submitting a resolution providing for a joint debate between Representative Dysart and ex-Governor McKelvie on their rival code bills.

The bill appropriating $75,000 for emergency bovine tuberculosis work was finally killed. This bill came up early in the session and has been kept alive by one means or another with the hope that it might finally be passed.

Representative Dysart opened the debate on the code repeal question with an elaborate explanation of his series of bills, which propose to reconstruct the code law.

No one will object very much to the bill which provides life imprisonment for anyone who sets fire to a building occupied by human beings.

An important bill, which will probably not be heard of because it remains an appropriation to make it effective, is one providing for forestry work in Nebraska.

The senate enjoyed a little flurry over the activities of lobbyists. Some of the senators thought these people are becoming too familiar and should be restrained.

Senator Perry Reed has accepted the challenge to meet Governor Bryan in joint debate on the code question. He proposes that York be the scene of battle.

At the time this was written, out of a total of 720 bills introduced in the lower house, 228 were still in the hands of standing committees.

The bill to abolish the party circle is having hard sledding. Representatives of both parties are against it.

The Hastings eugenic marriage bill requires county judges to notify parents by registered letter before granting license to minors.

House republican leaders predict that there is no hope for the governor's bills. But none of them are rash enough to predict that they can round up enough votes to pass the republican bills over the governor's veto.

C. A. Crawford, an employe of the chief clerk's office, lost all of his belongings in the big fire last week.

It is claimed that it is not fair to take the cornerstone for a comparison when considering the quality of the stone in the new capitol.

Representative Gallagher thinks both the architect and state engineer are at fault in the controversy over the stone used in the new capitol.

The senate bill fixing the weight of trucks that may be used on state highways attracted a liberal attendance of truck dealers when it was before the committee.

The senate spent most of a day discussing the Banning bill classifying auto trucks and fixing license fees for them.

One bill provides that inmates of the girls' industrial home may not get married and another provides that women who marry inmates of the soldiers' homes may not, by so doing, gain the right to live at the home as a veteran's wife or widow.

The house was unanimous in favor of a bill providing for taxing intangible property at full value.

Apparently, county superintendents are going to get four-year terms from now on. Non-resident students at the state university may have to pay tuition and it may be possible to build dormitories at the university with private funds.

The state basketball tournament was the biggest and most successful ever held. Some of the opponents of such things may be asking how much real school work was done by each school while its team was in Lincoln and during the time it was getting ready to come.

The senate approved a bill changing town meetings from March to January and killed one giving farmers the right to name their farms and register the name with the secretary of state.

Senator McGowan lost his other shirt, $25 in cash and the big end of a night's sleep in the Victoria hotel fire. But he saved his pipe.

The senate first cut out the $3000 salary clause from the Barr movie censorship bill and then proceeded to kill the bill. It then went on and killed the Rickard movie bill, which provided for two kinds of shows, one for grown-ups and one for children under 18.

The Osterman bill providing for open competition on bridges and culverts was killed in committee, but was raised by the house and placed on general file. It provides for publicity regarding cost of bridges.

The person who breaks a container containing liquor or pours liquor out when arrested will thereby convict himself of having liquor, if one bill now before the house becomes a law.

On request of Governor Bryan, a bill was introduced in the senate to validate the 1922 assessment on national banks. This was made necessary by a supreme court decision which invalidated the taxes.

Mrs. Grif J. Thomas died at her home in Harvard, March 13th. Her husband was one of the veteran editors of the state, he having been in charge of the Harvard Courier for about thirty years.

The house decided that it didn't care to listen to a debate between Tom Dysart and Governor Bryan on the code question.

D. A. R. MEETING HELD AT LINCOLN ON THURSDAY

Colors of Battleship Nebraska Presented as Patriotic Speeches Made by Members.

The conference D. A. R. meeting Thursday evening was held in the First Christian church at Lincoln, with about two hundred members and visitors present, says the State Journal.

One of the features of the program was the presentation of the stand of colors of the battleship, Nebraska, to the conference. Two principal speakers, Rev. Charles Shepherd, of Lincoln, and Mrs. George M. Minor, president of the G. A. R., were unable to be present.

The flags, a large silk ensign and a silk naval reserve flag, had been originally presented to the Nebraska in 1908 by Mrs. Sheldon, a member of the Deborah Avery chapter, and wife of Governor Sheldon.

The many friends throughout the county will be glad to learn that P. C. Stander is now safely on the road to recovery after a serious illness covering a period of about a month.

Mr. Stander was taken ill with the flu which developed into pneumonia, and for days, at intervals, his life was despaired of, but his physician, Dr. E. H. Worthman hung onto him when to hope seemed almost without reason.

The Courier joins with the friends in extending congratulations to Mr. Stander and family upon his recovery and wish him a speedy convalescence and the best of health in the future.—Louisville Courier.

GOING ON A THEORY OF NO WAR FOR A DECADE

London, March 22.—Premier Bonar Law, in a written reply to a question in the house of commons, states that the instructions basing estimates on the assumption that no great war is to be expected for a decade from 1919, are still operative, with regard to the admiralty, the war office and the air ministry.

In the debate in the house of lords Wednesday, the Duke of Sutherland, under secretary of the air ministry, said the government in 1919 laid down as an axiom that there was not likely to be any major war for a decade. He added that if the cabinet decided this axiom was no longer tenable and the country was ready to face the expenditures, a larger air force than at present maintained by the British could be raised.

AUTOMOBILE PRODUCTION INCREASES IN FEBRUARY

Trucks produced totaled 21,354 compared with 19,376 in January and 13,195 in February last year.

Registration of motor vehicles during 1932, according to the bureau of public roads, was 12,258,375 as compared with 3,500,000 in 1916.

NEW PAYMENT PLAN IN OCCUPATION COST Allied Commission Makes Another Proposition to Americans— Things Going Bad. Paris, March 22.—The allied delegates to the conference on the cost of the American Rhineland army today submitted a new payment plan to Eliot Wadsworth, assistant secretary of the United States treasury, for transmission to Washington. Mr. Wadsworth is understood to have demanded that if Germany floats a big reparations loan, the United States be paid its $255,000,000 therefrom. The impression gained from talking with the conferees after the meeting was that the conversations are becoming very complicated and there was the further suggestion that they are not going as smoothly as before. An absolute priority on future German reparations demanded by the American representative seems to have aroused some opposition among the allies. It is principally pointed out that such priority might mean that the United States would get a very large percentage of the German payments in those years in which the payments were not very great and thus dissatisfaction would be caused among those countries which otherwise would receive this money as reparations.
