BROTHERLY LOVE

Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you. We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death.—I John III, 13 and 14

Hasty judgments are generally faulty ones.

Omaha barbers unanimously endorse bobbed hair, and farmers in the state are understood to support the eat-more-wheat campaign heartily.

The Wolf of Wall Street has been discovered in Mexico, which must cause a self righteous shudder among the bears as they pick their teeth clean of lamb's wool.

Positively all this howling over taxation would get a more serious hearing if it were not still possible to raise more than a million dollars in this country for five minutes of prize fighting.

Now we know where Bermuda onions really come from; they are grown near Stark City, Mo., by a man named Frank Klise, who is known in those parts as the "onion king." Last year he set out 400,000 plants.

When President Coolidge seeks to acquit the tariff makers of sectional bias he has a poor case to present to his countrymen. It is easy to understand, however, his desire to subordinate the tariff question in the coming campaign. The Fordney-McCumber law is something of which the less said the better for the party that sponsored it. Party leaders will have an unpleasant reminder of this next December. A number of senators and representatives who a year ago were boasting of the part which they played in the enactment of this law will not be "among those present" when the new congress assembles.

There are some feelings which cannot be expressed mere words; let the philanthropist try to explain to a miser the joy of living.

IN DESPAIR

The attempt to obtain cheap energy by unlocking the vast power contained in the atom is practically futile, according to leading English scientists. He virtually "throws up the sponge" because able minds have been trying for about 20 years to release the energy in the atom, and seem no nearer to success than when they started.

Twenty years is nothing in the long history of humanity. Why, the crude principle of the steam was known 2,000 years or so ago. Yet it was not until about 150 years ago that the steam engine was made a practical or usable device.

All of us can understand the discharged English scientist. It is human nature to become impatient and discouraged during the battle for success—which nearly always is a slow battle.

For all we know, many may be on the very verge of discovering how to harness the atom's terrific power. Such great discoveries nearly always are the result of accident—blunder. An accident is like lightning, it comes unexpectedly, and cannot be foreseen.

It should be remembered that the seemingly impossible discoveries are made at unexpected moments. While the world was joking about airplanes and predicting that they were impossible, the Wright brothers suddenly made the first trip. It was so with the auto.

Nature demands her price, payment in full, for everything she gives us. A crop isn't matured to harvest overnight. It requires time, patience, effort. And, on the average, the farmer gets no more from his work than he puts into it.

The ability to harness the atom's power would be worth thousands of years of research. We can't expect nature to give us her secret until we have labored enough to deserve it. Trouble is, humanity expects too much—wants its pay before the job is finished.

PLUTOCRATIC PLASTERERS

Fond mothers who are busily engaged in planning the baby's future course in life are urged to turn his attention to the gentle art of plastering, especially if they chance to reside in the vicinity of Chicago. For piteous are the plaints that are going up from the Windy City from professors and bank presidents who turn green with envy as the kingly plasterer honks by to work in his car.

As a starter, the modern plutoocrat gets $15 a day for his eight hours of toil. But his income doesn't stop there. Men of this class are now so scarce that the contractors pay a flat bonus of $10, in advance, to every plasterer. Through the workings of an inexorable economic law, whenever the followers of any trade become particularly scarce, they tend to become haughty and overbearing.

Rumor has it that a new made movie queen looks like a humble supplicant compared to the pose of a plasterer of high degree, as he floats past the mental throng in his limousine.

Banks and brokerage concerns complain that their workers are becoming almost bolshevikish whenever a new building begins to be constructed near them. As the book-keeper surreptitiously trims a thread from the cuff of his shirt, his glance falls on the plutoocrat parking his car outside and he is apt to steal some of the firms money to go to a plastering school. Contractors state that it takes the men about an hour to park their cars in the morning and settle down to work. Frequently the line extends for two blocks from the building under course of construction and the automobiles are not all of a certain well known make of tin.

The worker then changes his clothing, chats with his fellows leisurely, and takes frequent time off to quaff a soda or a near beer. The bosses are helpless, as they dare not say a word for fear of losing the men's services to some rival contractor.

So don't raise your son to be a general, or president, or great musician. Teach him something that sounds less imposing, but is more remunerative, and he will win the beautiful lady just the same. The man with the fat purse always does.

PENNY BIBLES

It is a truism among book dealers that the bible is the best seller, but the general public has only a faint conception of how true this is, or how insatiable is the demand.

Last year about 30,000,000 bibles were printed and distributed, by various agencies, all over the world. Translations have been made into practically every known tongue, from Albanian, Arabic and Bulu to Yiddish, Zapotec and Zulu. Up to 1920, the bible had been published in 725 languages and dialects.

For the last two years, according to reports of the American Bible society, almost one-half the total output of bibles supplied by that agency has gone to the Chinese. In 1921 the Chinese took 2,362,730 volumes, an increase of 605,111 over the preceding year. And yet the supply has been far short of the demand, according to the society's oriental agents.

The American Bible society's budget each year is a little over $1,000,000. Those who direct the so-

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health. Relieves by local application, and the internal medicine, a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health. Sold by druggists for over 40 years. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

city's work claim that it could spend $5,000,000 a year on new bibles and still fall short of the demand. The bibles are sold at cost, and in many cases at less than cost. The expense of production and distribution is not quite half covered by the receipts from sales.

The largest recorded single order for new bibles is said to have been placed by the American society, calling for 3,000,000 copies of six separate books of the scriptures. These include five books of the new testament and one of the old. Each book will be printed in a tiny volume to be sold in this country and South America for one cent each.

Nearly $1,000,000 of these penny bibles of scripture were sold before printing started, and deliveries are promised at 50,000 a day.

Such figures confirm the claim that no other book, in any language, is as popular, or as cheap, as the bible. Of course, no other book is better distributed at less than cost. But the unique feature is that the most ancient of books is still the best modern seller. Nothing else in either ancient or modern literature can compete with it.—Chicago Journal.
