SAYS HAS CONFIRMED

THIRD EINSTEIN THEORY

Chicago, April 25.—The third prediction in the general theory of relativity advanced by Einstein has been confirmed by results obtained by Dr. Charles E. St. John, solar physicist working at the Mount Wilson observatory at Pasadena, Cal., according to word received by relatives here.

Dr. St. John said he has found that solar spectrum lines submit to a gravitational displacement to the degree predicted by Einstein himself, who said the theory stood or fell according as the displacement existed or not.

"This 'third effect' predicted by Einstein, the gravitational displacement of solar spectrum lines and its proof or disproof," he said, "has been the center of interest because among the mathematical physicists whose opinions carry great weight there has not been complete agreement. CHARLES MURPHY, PAST TAMMANY CHIEF, IS DEAD

Indigestion Cause of Demise—Was a Powerful Factor in Democratic Party Councils.

New York, April 25.—Charles F. Murphy, grand chieftain of Tammany, has died for many years a powerful factor in democratic councils of the state and nation, died today of heart failure induced by acute indigestion.

A product of the East Side's picturesque "Fishtown" district, he had his fist with them and then with brains, fought his way from the stockhold of ward politics to the quarter deck of party fame and financial fortune.

In a span of sixty-six years he had been poor man's son, ward healer, bar tender, saloon keeper, office holder, financier and finally local director and national adviser to his party.

He had graduated from the sorcerer's "Fishtown" district, through "Hurry-Burly," "Sport," "Silent Charles" and at the last "C. F. M.," the initials by which all knew him, although few of those who obeyed his commands ever had seen him. And always, from merest youth, his name and that of Tammany were linked together.

He retired last night after a busy day and a hearty dinner, to be awakened this morning by feverish chills and the pangs of indigestion. Characteristically he insisted on breakfast at the usual early hour. Immediately he became alarmingly ill and died a few minutes later in the presence of his physician, a priest, his daughter Mabel and her husband, Surgeon James A. Foley.

Long Linked with Tammany

The taciturn genius, who had ruled the destinies of Tammany hall for twenty-two years, his successor to the late Richard Croker, remained conscious to the end, unaware that death was near. He submitted docilely to the hypodermic injected when his physician recognized that collapse was imminent and his only comment was of surprise that indigestion should have awakened him, and that his heart caused him pain.

Mrs. Murphy, who was in Atlantic City, was summoned home. Although her husband died before she could entrain, she was not aware of it until she was met by friends at this end of the journey.

Tammany hall was the first to learn that death had invaded the home of its leader near Gramercy park. The party's Big Wigwag on Fourteenth street, half-staffed its flag and went into mourning. Party chiefs and Tammany workers assembled from all outlying vicinities to pay tribute to the memory of their leader and speculate as to his successor. Police and traffic reserves controlled the throngs that gathered about the old-fashioned mansion where he died.

Coming at a time when Tammany hall girded itself for a strenuous presidential campaign and so soon after his protégé, Governor Alfred E. Smith had formally entered the lists for the democratic presidential nomination, Mr. Murphy's death was mourned by high political leaders as a party misfortune, if not an actual calamity.

Pears in some quarters that Governor Smith's aspirations would be seriously handicapped were offset, however, by assertions of Murphy's team mates that the leader had schooled his organization so perfectly and laid his plans so carefully that his death would have no detrimental effect.

Tammany's greatest concern tonight was the choice of a man big enough to carry on where Murphy left off. A meeting of the executive committee hastily was called to discuss the situation, although it was understood that a new chieftain would not be named until after the funeral.

Mrs. Vaunie Black was in Omaha today for a few hours looking after some matters of business.

Miss Marie Kaufman was among the visitors in Omaha this morning, returning home this afternoon.

Miss Jessie M. Robertson was among those going to Omaha on the early morning Burlington train today to spend a few hours there looking after some matters of business.

They settled on the old homestead one and one-half miles northwest of Nehawka, which Mr. Rose had preempted in 1857.

Here they made their home until 1905, when they retired from the farm and moved into Nehawka.
