CAR GOES INTO THE DITCH

From Monday's Daily—
Early Sunday morning a small accident occurred on the federal highway near the E. H. Spangler home and as the result of which the Ford coupe belonging to W. R. Holly was very badly damaged. The car was being used by William Kettleson and Clarence and Jack Ledgeway and the young men had gone out for a little spin after the dance and when near the Spangler home one of the wheels on the car broke and caused the car to run to the side of the road and overturn into the ditch and caused a great deal of damage to the car. Fortunately the members of the auto party escaped without serious injury although Mr. Kettleson received a slight cut over the eye from the flying glass. The injured car was brought on into the city later by Lee Cotner and placed in the Ford hospital of George Petring where it will be repaired and placed in commission again. In the meantime, Mr. Holly is traveling via the foot power.

DRAWS DOWN FINE

From Monday's Daily—
This morning Judge Weber was called upon to hear the complaint filed against a young man named Craig who was charged with operating a motor vehicle under a 1923 license number despite the fact that almost half of the year 1924 has elapsed. The man was apprehended by Constable Tom Svoboda and after the matter was threshed out before the court, Judge Weber imposed a fine of $1 on the young man and he was sent on his way rejoicing.

When the Binder Bucks

Did you ever ride a broncho? If not, you can get about the same experience by riding a binder or mowing machine across a field which is all cut up with ditches. The small ones are bad enough, but when you hit a big one and break a casting or two then trouble begins.

What can be done with these large ditches when they can no longer be crossed with machinery? Of course they can be fenced I need allowed to get deeper and wider each year until a good field is cut into several irregular fields, but a better plan is to use one or more soil saving dams in each ditch. Properly constructed soil saving dams will fill a large gully in a short time until it can again be crossed with ease.

A heavy earth dam placed across the gully will effectively check the flow of water and cause a fill of earth to form on the upstream side. It is evident that during a big rain the gully will soon become filled with flood water and in a short time the dam would be washed away. It is therefore necessary to provide a means of escape for the water which is accumulated behind the dam. This is done by placing under the dam a concrete or tile culvert, the upstream end of which is turned up vertically for several feet. It is evident that as soon as the water reaches the level of the top of the pipe, it will find a ready means of escape, but will leave the loose soil behind. Those interested in the construction of the soil saving dam should get in touch with the local Farm Bureau, which will give them the necessary information.

T. B. Testing

The petitions for a county wide test of our cattle are coming favorably. Many counties are circulating petitions so the sooner ours are on file at Lincoln, the better. Push it along.

COMMISSIONERS IN SESSION

From Wednesday's Daily—
The board of county commissioners yesterday convened for their regular monthly meeting and to review with the various bills and problems that were on hand to confront them.

One of the chief matters that is up for the consideration of the board is that of securing assistant counsel for the board of commissioners in the district court that comes up as the result of the indictments returned last November by the grand jury. The chief case that has been set for hearing at this term of court is that of the State of Nebraska vs. C. D. Quinton, others having been laid over until the final term by agreement. In the previous cases in January, special council was on hand to represent the interests of the state and to oppose the notable array of legal talent that had been assembled for the defense. In these cases the state secured convictions in all but two of the cases. The amount of fines and costs covered by the verdicts in favor of the state will practically care for almost all of the grand jury expense and the trials.

In the pending cases, County Attorney Capwell will appear but as he has not participated in the other cases finds that he should, in justice to the interests of the state, have assistance in the cases and has had the matter up with the board of commissioners but so far there have been no definite arrangements made for securing the desired assistance. The services of an auditor will also be necessary in preparing the evidence in the case and this also is pending before the board altho the trial of the cases will start a week from today.
