All go-getters have shary elbows.
 Well, Congress is keeping cool to-ward Coolidge.
 Dieting is an easy thing—until you get hungry.
 These pre-election investigations may forestall some post-election investigations.
 Many of us can't give our old clothes to the poor because then we would get sunburned all over.
 Not so long ago every man who blossomed out in a checkered suit in the spring was considered a gambler.
 It is to be hoped this will make things plainer to the boss. When you see a man with a far-off look, it's the vacation daze.
 In the recent elections the outs have won in Britain, France and Japan. Somehow the voters don't seem quite satisfied.
 Anatole France says the French election was a step toward peace, but probably that's more a literary than a political view.
 Enrico Caruso's widow has chased her new husband off the premises. Well, that bird ought to have known that the widow had acquired some of Enrico's well known temperament.
 A recent recipe for tea cakes says in conclusion, "Bake in a cold oven." Or, if the cook has left the oven full of unwashed pans, as usual, the refrigerator probably would do just as well.
 Former Governor McCray of Indiana has accepted a position as assistant librarian at the Atlanta penitentiary. And he might have been chief librarian if he had been better at keeping books.
 A chaperon reader asks if anyone knows how to shrink a sweater. It can be done, of course, but if one eats lots of white bread and potatoes, it soon becomes unnecessary to shrink one's sweater.
 Money is handy stuff to have around the house for paying bills, buying gasoline and telling the neighbors about. It does not go as far as it once did, but it goes far enough to forget the way back.
 Notable physicians have prophesied that in ten years all women will be tubercular. Will women heed this advice? They will not. Women would not resume red flannel underwear again—not if Tee Bee stood in the door.
 "Will the G. O. P. read out of the party me or the President," said Senator Norris, who declares that Coolidge repudiated the platform by his veto of the bonus. The difference is that Senator Norris is for the people and Coolidge is against them.
 Business is picking up a bit, according to latest reports from the railroads. They're handling more freight—less than a year ago, but far more than two and three years ago. Most of the drop, compared with this time of year in 1923, is in decreased coal shipments. Grain, livestock and general merchandise are being shipped on even a bigger scale than last year. Except for coal, the roads are close to breaking all freight-handling records for this season of the year.
 Should American citizens who neglected to vote be fined $10 apiece? This question was debated and rejected at the convention of New Jersey Manufacturers' association. People are in effect fined a lot more than $10 by failure to vote. Corruption and extortion cost the public fabulous sums. Those and most other evils could be snuffed out at the polls by intelligent voting. Our government is flexible. Any change we want can be brought about by the ballot. But Americans, though geniuses at industry, are morons at self government.

ACCORDING TO THEIR WORKS
 And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them. And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of these things which were written in the books, according to their works.—Revelations 20:11, 12.

A certainly bakery in Little Rock, Ark., calls itself "The Wife Saving Station."
 There is a question in our mind which has caused the most trouble—face or gunpowder.
 A Boston man thinks his wife kisses other men, so is asking for a divorce instead of feeding her onions.
 What has become of the old fashioned woman who sought her husband's advice on how to arrange her hair.
 Congress hopes to adjourn June 7, and maybe it can if it doesn't spend any more time passing bills to be vetoed.
 Maybe the reason the government is so puzzled over the regulation of the radio is because there are no wires to pull.
 Canada is voting to cut taxes. Can't the Canadian parliament find some way to spend the extra money? Congress could.
 Some of us are so skilful at making excuses and digging up alibis that we think it is not necessary to avoid mistakes.
 Jud Tunkins says even when he takes his wife's advice she's liable to tell him later he ought to have been man enough to make up his own mind.
 Nearly a year now since the Chinese bandits captured a train. It is possible the bandits have taken over the railroads and are now running the trains?
 The outskirts of Utopia are about the best we can make until the weather man spreads some of August's sunshine across the blossomy breast of May.
 Among other things with which Mr. Trotzky charges the United States is bullying the strongest fleet of airships in the world. It is too bad he isn't right.
 Popular song composers complain that radio broadcasting wears out the popularity of their songs too quickly. And radio is only in the infancy of its usefulness.
 It is said three-fifths of England's war widows have remarried. We are still puzzling over what has kept the other 40 per cent from it. Girls stand no chance when there's a widow around.
 The Dawes plan is brightly regarded as a fair settlement of the reparations problems. But the most convincing argument for it with Germany seems to be the French army in the Ruhr.
 According to a Moscow correspondent, Russia has a poets' union with 7,000 members. They probably count free verses as standard work, and demand time and a half for one rhyme to the quatrain.
 Next month, according to calendars, which often are absolutely correct, is June. June, according to custom established years ago, is the month of June bugs and June bridegrooms. And the obvious remark is that little boys catch one while their older sisters catch the other.
 Too many young women neglect to give as much attention to the inside of their faces as to the outside, says Evelyn C. Schmidt of the American Dental association. She urges as much care for the teeth as for the complexion. The two are related. Neglected teeth—unclean and decaying—poison the body and ruin the complexion. Real beauty is a by-product of health. The most alluring peach bloom of the cheek is not sold at the drug store.

AN "ABSOLUTE REMARK"

If President Coolidge is right, the League of Nations will never include the United States. In all probability, he is not right; for the theory—or the ideal, as Mr. Wilson's opponents like to call it—is so eternally right that it must prevail in the end. But if he is right, what means is there of assuring continuing peace in the world? The answer will be unwelcome to the many who have never been able to disregard the war of the revolution, but it is, nevertheless, certain. The one other agency to keep the peace of the world is an offensive and defensive alliance between Great Britain and the United States.
 Mr. Wilson hoped for an offensive and defensive alliance of all the powers. Perhaps that will come some day. But there was a civilian member of his government who saw a way of keeping the peace nearer at hand than a general league. He set it out, and at the same time spoke with righteous indignation of a myth which has been invoked by politicians and even by able men for years. In a letter to Colonel House, the late Walter H. Page, ambassador to Great Britain, wrote:
 "Now, because George Washington warned us against alliances, we've gone on as if an alliance were a kind of smallpox. Suppose there were—let us say for argument's sake—the tightest sort of an alliance, offensive and defensive, between all Britain, colonies and all, and the United States, what would happen? Anything we'd say would go, whether we should say, 'Come in out of the wet' or 'Disarm.' That might be the beginning of a real world alliance and union to accomplish large results—disarmament, for instance, or arbitration—dozens of good things. I'm not proposing a program. I am only thinking so long as we choose to be ruled by an obsolete remark made by George Washington."
 That letter was written in January, 1914. The greatest war in history has been fought, because there was no association great enough and inclusive enough to prevent war. There is no association now, and the measure of disarmament either agreed upon or contemplated will not prevent war. There must be a powerful league or—an alliance between great Britain and the United States.

ROUT THE WEEDS

While spring showers bring the beautiful May flowers which we are now enjoying, they also encourage the unwelcome weeds. These latter, if left to themselves, will soon overrun garden and lawn and give an untidy and neglected appearance to those premises where they are not combated.
 Weeds in the spring are not unlike the camel who first puts his nose into the Arab's tent and finally came in wholly, crowding out the poor master. They are not difficult to curb when they first appear, but if they once obtain a sure hold they overshadow grass and flowers and dominate the yard or neutral ground.
 Plattsmouth has become very attractive again after the brief period of barrenness caused by the severe winter. The trees are green and lovely and flowers are growing about hundreds of homes. Pride in premises seems to be increasing and thus the city as a whole appears to better advantage.
 It is natural to become interested in cleaning and painting and planting when the spring first arrives. The unrestrained freedom of the out-of-doors and the smell of the fresh earth bring the desire to form a partnership with spring. It seems very simple then to put a few seeds into the ground and to watch eagerly for them to appear. There are no enemies then.

He will make the season of 1924 at my home on the Phil Becker farm, 7 miles west of Plattsmouth.

 But the test comes later when the grass grows unduly tall and the impudent weeds appear, threatening to choke the flowers and to change one's tidy garden into a straggling, unkempt plot. It requires persistence to keep the grass mown and the rank invaders out, but it can be done.
 Don't let the enemy gain the vantage point. Take the offensive now, and rout him out before he has opportunity to romp about over our nice yards and muss up our orderly premises. Go after the weeds now.

Protective Lubrication
 with clean oil is real economy

You are not saving money when you pour clean oil into a crank-case containing dirty oil heavily diluted with gasoline. You are hurrying your motor to the junk pile. Strong language. But consider these facts.

No matter how carefully piston rings are fitted, or how finely the carburetor is adjusted, gasoline vapors leak past the piston rings. Besides this, oil is contaminated by hard particles of road dust drawn in through the carburetor and the breather tubes. After 500 miles of operation, crank-case oil is becoming a grinding solution. With such oil rapid wear and loss of power are certain.
 Adjust the carburetor carefully. Use the choke sparingly. Replace worn piston rings. Flush out all old oil and refill with

Polarine

Polarine after every 500 miles of operation. Always use the grade of Polarine best suited to your motor.
 This assures protective lubrication and operating economy. You gain many times the cost of the additional oil in greater power and bigger mileage from gasoline, and in smaller repair bills.
 Look for this sign. Consult the Polarine Chart. Buy the grade recommended—a grade to suit every car—light, medium, medium heavy, special heavy and extra heavy. Give your motor protective lubrication.
