Bruce Wolfe, and "Curley" Hathaway slipped the writer the information that they were able on account of the very wet season this summer to catch a ten pound cat (fish), on a corn field on a high hill. This was surprising, but we have known people to catch such fish already dressed at their homes, using a silver hook.

Herman L. Swanson and family were visiting in Eagle on last Sunday, Mr. Swanson returning home on the midnight train Sunday evening while the family remained and came home on the train Monday evening.

Carl Stone of Nehawka has been hauling corn to the farm from Union for feeding purposes.

Knows How To Raise Potatoes.

Constable and painter, J. F. Wilson, who knows just how to raise potatoes, has been meeting with great success this summer. He has occasion to want a mess of spuds from his garden last Sunday and taking a pair and hoe, he went to the garden and tries three hills, and after taking an inventory found that one hill had yielded 13 spuds of good size, while the other two had occasion up twenty each, making 53 for the three hills. He now has stones laid on the lower ends of the rows to keep some one from opening or cutting off the ends of the rows to keep all the potatoes from running out.

Enjoy Picnic at Omaha.

Last Sunday, the family of J. C. Reddy with the exception of Mr. Reddy and Herbert, the latter having the mumps very severely, the father remaining home to care for the son, went to Omaha, where they were joined by the children in a picnic which was held at Elmwood park.

TREASURY TO HAVE BIG SURPLUS DESPITE THE BONUS

Representative Madden Issues Official Estimates on U. S. Finances—Higher than Expected

Washington, June 22.—The government will close its fiscal year in June with an excess of receipts over expenditures for the year of 48 million dollars or about 170 million dollars more than was estimated last fall. In spite of the enactment of soldiers' bonus legislation involving large expenditures, the fiscal year 1925 will show an excess of receipts over expenditures of 60 million dollars instead of the huge deficit at one time predicted by the treasury.

These estimates of surpluses for the fiscal years 1924 and 1925 are made officially for the first time in a statement issued today by Representative Madden, republican, Illinois, chairman of the house committee on appropriations.

Senator Warren, republican, Wyoming, chairman of the senate committee on appropriations, in a statement, also made public today, says that appropriations for the fiscal year 1925 are approximately 180 million dollars less than for 1924, that the public debt has been reduced between August 31, 1919, and May 31, 1924, by $4,130,626.70, and that the excess of receipts over expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, will be "not less than 5 hundred million dollars."

Representative Madden and Senator Warren as the two spokesmen on matters of appropriations for the republicans in house and senate, paint the picture of the country's financial condition in rosy colors.

Frank E. Schlater, wife and children are spending a short time at Louisville with relatives and old time friends preparatory to leaving for their new home on the ranch in Garden county near Hayard.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

Copy for this Department furnished by County Agent

Hessian Fly.

There are a few flies this year but in most fields they will do little or no damage. In fields sown before the heavy rains last fall there are more flies. Some of these fields were plowed up this spring because of the fly. Now is the time to make a campaign of the early sown and late. If we eradicate the fly entirely we must sow late this year also. We will let you know the exact date later.

Infertile Eggs.

Now is the time to sell the roosters from your flock. Infertile eggs keep the best. Do this now, sell or kill them. The quality of an egg cannot be improved but it may be maintained by 1.—Paying attention to the egg characteristics of the flock and of the breeding stock especially.

2.—Producing infertile eggs at all times except during the hatching season. 3.—Consuming at home or on the farm as much of the egg as possible.

4.—Exercising greater care in handling and marketing of eggs, that is, gathering them frequently, keeping them in a cool well ventilated place and marketing often. 5.—Consuming at home or on the farm as much of the egg as possible because of having been gathered from a stolen nest. 6.—Selling to a buyer or dealer whose prices depend upon quality as well as count.

Protect the Cows From Flies.

In a large measure flies are responsible for low milk yields during the summer and thin cattle in the fall. Sows should be protected from them as much as possible, advises the Agricultural College, Lincoln. One of the best methods of doing this is to keep the cows stabled during the heat of the day in cool darkened barns. Windows can be darkened by nailing gunny sacks over them. It is also a good plan to hang gunny sacks over the door in such a manner that the flies will be brushed from the cows as they enter the barn. In case it is desirable to spray the cows, a good spray can be made from the following ingredients:

100 parts of fish oil, 50 parts of oil of tar, and 1 part of carbolic acid.

NEBRASKA SHOWS WELL IN DEATH RATE STATISTICS

Very Low Rate from Diabetes in the Industrial Centers, According to Latest Reports.

Nebraska is one of thirty-two states which showed a lower diabetes death rate among its wage-earning population in cities than the rate among the same group throughout the United States. This fact was ascertained from the death claims for 1923 of the 13,000,000 white industrial policyholders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. These men and women comprise about one-fourth of the entire industrial population of the United States and Canada.

The diabetes death rate for this industrial group, according to the company's mortality experience, was 16.3 per 100,000 persons insured. Nebraska's rate for this disease was 11.

The company's latest statistical bulletin calls attention to the marked decline in deaths from diabetes throughout 1923 and the first four months of 1924, notwithstanding the continuous rise which had been recorded in the three years prior to 1923. It states: "During the first four months of 1924 the diabetes death rate has shown a further reduction over the corresponding period of 1923. These reductions have followed the beginning of a more or less general use of insulin. So far, at least, in 1924, the drop is accentuated as the use of insulin treatment increases, but this must not be considered as the effect of the use of insulin without further proof."

Western Canada showed the lowest 1923 diabetes mortality in the United States or Canada. In Saskatchewan there was not one death from this cause among the company's 25,000 industrial policyholders. In the United States generally there are more deaths in the north than in the south. The lowest rate of all is shown in the western group of states from the mountains to the coast.

In sixteen central states, bounded by Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Michigan, Alabama and Oklahoma, the mortality is below the average for the country as a whole, but there are exceptions. Exceedingly low rates were recorded for South Carolina, North Carolina, Arkansas, Tennessee and Kansas. The highest diabetes mortality in any geographic division was found in the Middle Atlantic states (20.8 per 100,000) followed by New England (17.3).

"In general the mortality is higher in the northern states than in the southern," the statistical bulletin announced. "There is an important racial factor involved in diabetes. The above average mortality in such states as New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Rhode Island is very possibly due to the relatively large percentage of those of foreign birth."

When there are exceptions to this, it is because the states have large numbers of elderly people in their populations. Such states would naturally suffer high mortality from diabetes because the death rate for this disease rises with advancing age."

Doctors Asked to Cooperate with State Department of Health in Getting Results.

Dr. J. D. Case, superintendent of the state department of public health and welfare, has begun a crusade to eliminate diphtheria from the state if possible, and has sent a letter to all of the physicians asking their cooperation in enforcing quarantine laws. The letter follows:

"In checking over the records for Nebraska, we find an increase in the deaths for 1923 over that of 1922, caused by diphtheria.

"The record for the entire United States shows a reduction of the death rate from 30 to 8 per cent, during the same period. This is not the kind of a record we want Nebraska to have. We are requesting your cooperation in making a special effort to eliminate diphtheria from the state. We believe it will be possible to wipe out this dreadful disease if more attention is paid to enforcing the quarantine laws and the proper use of immunization. One doctor cannot do it alone, one health officer cannot do it alone, and one citizen cannot do it alone, but the doctor, the health officer and the citizen working in harmony and cooperation can accomplish wonders.

"It will be necessary for everyone to assume a certain amount of responsibility. We should also give to our people, more information in regard to the protection offered by the use of toxin-antitoxin and the proper use of the Schick test.

"Enclosed you will find a bulletin which has been prepared for distribution. A supply will be mailed to you upon request.

"For the sake of the little children of Nebraska, we earnestly urge your assistance and your cooperation with the state department of health. In making a strong drive against diphtheria."

A comparison of diphtheria deaths in Nebraska for the past two years shows 129 in 1922 and 138 in 1923.

ASKS FOR INJUNCTION

From Monday's Daily—

This morning Frederick Omar Schlichtemeier, through his attorney, William A. Robertson, filed a petition in the office of the clerk of the district court, asking that the court grant a restraining order against Frederick Frank Schlichtemeier, enjoining the defendant from trespassing on the property claimed by the plaintiff.

In the petition the plaintiff alleges that he is the owner of a life interest in certain real estate located in Cass county, Nebraska, and that the defendant, Frederick Frank Schlichtemeier, and his agents have trespassed on the aforesaid land of the plaintiff, removed fences and caused ditches to be dug that have caused damages to the plaintiff, and he asks that the court grant an injunction to permanently forbid the defendant and his agents from trespassing on the land.

In the absence from the city of District Judge James T. Begley, the matter was taken up by County Judge Allen J. Beeson, and the temporary restraining order granted. The hearing on the application will be held on Saturday, June 28th, in district court here.

Hay, There!

The haying season is here and you should make an extra effort to take care of such a valuable crop.

A hay barn will do the trick. Save feed, the stock will need it next winter, or if you do not need it for your stock, there is always a market for good hay.

A granery will save the wheat. Put it out of the weather and away from the rats and sell when the price suits you.
