clean oil and Protective Lubrication make motoring less expensive

> T is a mistake to keep dumping fresh oil into dirty crankcase oil indefinitely. Up to five hundred miles replace used oil quart by quart. But after five hundred miles you actually save money by flushing out the old oil and refilling with fresh Polarine.

Gasoline dilutes the crank-case oil every time you use the choke and as long as the motor is running. Road dust is drawn in at every stroke of the piston.

After five hundred miles of operation your motor oil contains hard dirt particles and is so heavily diluted with gasoline and condensed water that it can't give protective lubrication. It is gradually becoming a grinding solution.

Here are the reasons

To avoid wearing out your motor and paying big repair bills, drain and flush the crank-case every five hundred miles. Keep clean oil of the right body on every bearing surface. Then you will have protective lubrication. You'll actually save many times the cost of extra oil you use and get more power and mileage from gasoline.

Consult the Polarine Chart. Use the grade recommended for your car. Buy oil where you see this sign-five grades to suit every type and make of car-light, medium, medium heavy, special heavy and extra heavy.
