

HARVEST NOW ON IN SOUTHERN PART OF WHEAT BELT

Oklahoma and Kansas Harvest Fields are Busy and Ripening Grain in Nebraska Progressing

Oklahoma's harvest was in full swing Saturday, June 21st, according to reports reaching the Journal office yesterday. Cutting in this southern state was slow in starting and releases cannot be expected much before July 1st. However, many men are coming through Oklahoma into Kansas with plenty to meet Oklahoma's needs with the possible exception of the extreme northwestern counties—Harper, Beaver and Texas—where a slightly acute shortage is reported. Cutting has started in Sumner county (Kansas) with the drift from the south ample and surplus men being directed into Wichita. Harper county started binders a few days ago and harvest was in full swing there yesterday. Sedgwick county farmers are also getting the work under way and operations will be in full swing there by the middle of this week.

Fruit, Stafford, Reno, Rice, Barton, Pawnee and Edwards counties started their binders yesterday and with continued favorable weather conditions should have their headers in action by Thursday and the work in full swing by Saturday.

Reports from Salina indicate that Saline, Dickinson, Ellsworth and Lincoln counties will begin cutting the middle of this week. The Kansas City central labor office has been holding back those men who are able to remain in the city in order to prevent congestion in the fields in advance of harvest. All men sent from the labor offices at St. Louis, Kansas City, Joplin, Springfield and points to the south and east have gone with definite information that harvest had not yet started. Those who were determined to get into the fields notwithstanding, were given accurate information as to the proper points to go.

As yet only a small portion of the men going to the fields have gone into Kansas due to the effort to hold back all those who were not determined or compelled by lack of funds to go at once, but starting Saturday the lid was lifted and all men on shipments or otherwise were being sent into Kansas, mostly to Wichita for redistribution from there. Starting Monday, the influx into that state were being directed to other points in proportion to the requirements.

Daily reports are received at the Kansas City office from special government agents as well as county agricultural agents, giving information as to the progress of the harvest, number of men in town, and the number coming in each day. This enables the Kansas City office to keep in closest touch with the needs of the different localities and direct the men accordingly. Those having charge of this work state they believe they will be able to supply the requirements of central and western Kansas, and then as the harvest continues to move north into Nebraska and Dakota, the number following it up, together with those entering the work in those states will prove sufficient to carry it through to the Canadian line without difficulty. The only thing that will cause a reversal of the order would be poor ripening weather in this section, and the opposite further north. The protracted cool weather continuing up to a short time ago retarded the harvest of northern Oklahoma and south central Kansas, but as the condition has been general in Nebraska and states further north as well, little reversal of the swing of the harvest hands in their northward movement is expected in this section.

As usual, even with the best of supervision and direction, some communities are suffering with an overabundance of help, but the work is being handled much more satisfactorily than in years gone by, when the undirected rush of harvest hands to certain portions caused a general congestion and a shortage in other sections.

As the northward movement of harvest hands reaches this state, direction of the men will be undertaken by sub offices at Lincoln and other points over the state, so they may be assured of maximum work at all times.
