Butler Disputing La Follette Claim

Republican Chairman Says There is Not Going to be Any Sweeping of Northwest by Him.

New York, Aug. 4.—Chairman William N. Butler of the republican national committee, after conferring with party leaders here today, disputed La Follette's claim to the northwestern states.

"I do not think there is going to be any La Follette sweep in the northwest," he said. "I don't get it. I was out there for a week or ten days and I did not get any such impression."

Chairman Butler expressed confidence in the success of the republican national ticket and said not only the words of the leaders but the comment of average citizens thru the country form the foundation of his belief.

"There is an honest desire to secure a place on the bandwagon," he added. "which is encouraging to say the least, for places on such a vehicle are not generally sought unless the traveling is good."

Regarding the situation in the northwest, Chairman Butler predicted that the increased price of wheat would have a great deal to do with the success of the republican party.

"There has been a marked change out there," he said, "and the farmers are looking forward with their hopeful attitude towards the future."

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON

Subverting Native Sons

Golden Text: What ever He sayeth unto you do it.—John 2:5.

When the armies of France were once crossing the Mediterranean sea during a clear, serene summer night, the officers were discussing the question of the existence of a supreme being.

Was there a God? Napoleon Bonaparte, then at his greatest in multitude and popularity, was pacing the deck of the boat on which he rode when one of the officers stopped him as he was passing with the query: "Is there a God?" Napoleon paused but for a second and pointing to the heavens which were studded with a multitude of bright stars, said, "Who made them?" This placed the Emperor of infidel France in the column of the believers in the God of the universe.

That Nature which is so great that we cannot conceive its vastness, must have had a creator which Napoleon recognized as God. At the dawn of creation when the Eternal Jehovah hung the stars in the heavens which were to stay until that period the law of their creation. The constituent parts of the wine which was used at the oriental wedding has been in practice since having for its base the juice of the grapes.

When the wine ran short and the fact was made known to the Master he commanded the water pots be filled with water. They were filled to overflowing and with no wavering of a wand or repeating of superstitious words, he bade those in charge to draw the water from the jars and they did so the water was transferred into wine. This required a power as great as the power which made the original grape to grow and is the first demonstration of his power as the son and representative of God in working in conjunction with Him in maintaining and directing his power. This proved his sonship as much as any thing which had happened before.

With the authority with which he was clothed Jesus the Christ was at the same time a man and intensely human in that he had the holy law of marriage and was willing to attend the wedding feast, rub elbows with humanity as he found them, sympathizing with them in their troubles and enjoying with them their pleasures. Where they had no wine he made it, that the wedding could go on as was the practice. People wondered at this subverting of the laws of Nature and recognized him as the Messiah, the son of God. They were to see more demonstrations of that power which created worlds, restored the functions of life when they had been suspended which rectified the abnormal condition or state of ones being which we call health. These miracles were only ordinary when compared to the power demonstrated later, that of forgiveness of sins when the spiritual dead was restored to life. The most wonderful was when he gave his life to purchase redemption for mankind, that we might, thought we had forfeited all our rights by obedience again have life. The mother said: "What ever he sayeth unto you, do it." These things which he has said unto us are in the Bible, therefore search the Scriptures for in them you have eternal life.

greater part of the time was spent in and near Tacoma, Washington, with their sister, Mrs. Frank E. Cook and family and in the many points of interest there they found much pleasure. The trip is one they will both very pleasantly remember for a long time to come.
