THE GRACE OF GOD

Now unto God and our Father be glory for ever and ever. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.—Philippians iv, 20, 23.

A lot of worry also comes to those who wait.

Well, the hot weather we all were wanting is back again.

Entirely too many girls get married to keep from being old maids.

Poor little movie stars; several of them have been married again yet.

Fire broke out in a Chicago police station, but they caught it in time.

Big crowds attend the state fair at Lincoln. Really, larger than ever before.

Labor chiefs say Davis is the best choice in the presidential race. Why, of course.

The stone age man had his wife at his feet. The modern man has her at his heels.

"Shot by Suitor"—headline. The suitor didn't suit her so he decided to shoot her.

If we really become what we eat, lot of us are headed toward being glass of ice tea.

What is needed now is some form of regulation that will give more publicity to the bridegroom.

Another astonishing thing about saving the country is how often the enemy is up and beat you to it.

Dawes says he intends to make several speeches in Wisconsin. Take a fool's advice, General, and stay out.

An immense crowd of people will visit Omaha Saturday to see the next president of the United States—John W. Davis.

A hypocritical two-faced person, whether in religion, politics or the daily walks of life will wear watch-glasses continually. He is not honest or truthful.

We note that the girls—who had temporarily discarded the short skirts, a few months ago—are resuming their work along higher educational lines.

The department of agriculture says farming doesn't yield an adequate return. Returns in November are expected especially to distress the administration.

Beauty shops are ruining the land. Today a single eyelash worries a woman more than a sink full of dirty dishes. And sometimes a single eye wink will worry a man for life.

When the barber had completed bobbing her hair he said: "Will you have a single, madam?" She replied: "No, I guess my husband will attend to that when he finds I have bobbed my hair."

A scientist has calculated that the yield of an average man opens and shuts no fewer than 4,000,000 times in the course of a year. In the course of a year a man certainly sees a lot of things he has to wink at.

Grade crossings took their usual amount of toll both Sunday and Monday. Such accidents are becoming more numerous than ever. Will the people of tomorrow never learn to look and listen at those crossings? It seems not.

Judging from the press dispatches reporting the agricultural activities of Calvin Coolidge, who was summing in Vermont, the farmers of that state don't raise anything but hay. We profess no knowledge of the resources of Vermont soil, but we do know that it raises darned poor presidential timber.

Senator La Follette is not a bad man by any means, and is no doubt honest in his convictions. And even if elected president, he would not try to run the country to the dogs. He claims still to be a republican, but believes the present administration if let alone would run it by the centralization of power by taking many state rights from the people.

Due to the world peace shortage, Mexico is having trouble again.

Wives cost eight oxen in Zululand because they do the work of more.

Any man who gets up early on Sunday is lazy. He does it so he will have more time to loaf.

The harvest moon is coming, and if a bachelor can get by it he will be fairly safe until spring.

If the flight from Iceland to Greenland was a hop, the remaining stages of the world flight are mere steps.

In Paris the fashionable girls are going without stockings, perhaps so they won't have to go without men.

"Facts About Women," says a newspaper headline, but there isn't any such thing as facts about women.

A woman's place is in the home, and when she is out of her place everything else seems to be out of place.

Mr. Darrow says the crime is proof of their insanity; and the law prescribes a cure for that kind of insanity.

"Beauty is an accident," say psychologists. And we say it often results in internal injuries, such as heart trouble.

The obsessing fear that a candidate for vice president will fly off the handle and say something is more than the old line politician can bear.

Dan Butler has again been selected as a candidate for governor by petition. Dan's only object is to beat somebody and that's all their is to it. He knows he can't be elected.

This country has a competent potential army on paper. The crucial moment for such a force arrives when necessary to get the units together to try out the communications to transmit the word to the men and the officers. This is the big idea behind "Defense Day."

According to the newspapers, the president has been busy raking "Cousin Ed's" hay. That shows Mr. Coolidge is provident. He's making hay while the sun shines. Perhaps he has taken the hint that, for republicans, the sun isn't going to shine much longer.

Senator Norris says he is not for La Follette and he is not running on that ticket. If he is running on the republican ticket can the progressives support him? Norris is simply hoodwinking the people by carrying water on both shoulders. That's his game.

President Coolidge has admitted to newspaper men, that he doesn't care for doughnuts, thus breaking down the old tradition that all New Englanders like that sort of truck. If we could just get Mr. Coolidge to talk a little more he might break down a few others. For example, there is one about Plymouth Rock antedating Jamestown as the first permanent English settlement in this country.

The cost of living is 62 per cent higher than before the war—$1.62 needed to buy what cost $1 in July, 1914. For rents, the figure is 85 per cent instead of 62. These are the latest statistics from the National Industrial Conference Board. They cover the needs of a wage earner with five in the family. And they represent an average for the whole country. In some districts, the cost of living is higher, in others it is lower. The only consolation is that the long range tendency is downward.

The republicans in this campaign do not hesitate to say that the democratic ticket deserves defeat because of the "Bryanism" that swept the party twenty-eight years ago. Yet, if the democrats suggest that the republican ticket deserves defeat because of the mixture of Fallism, Forbesism, Newberryism, Daughertyism, Jess Smithism, W. J. Burnsism and a good many other isms that swept the republican party only a few months ago, General Dawes puffs his up-side-down pipe and yells "demagogue" at them. It just depends upon which party you attempt to damn with isms.

THE ISSUE

"I have one message for the American people in this campaign. I expect to deliver it all over the United States. The message I am carrying to the people is honesty in government—whether they do or not want in this country an honest, candid and a fearless government."

In this short statement, John W. Davis defines what, in his opinion and in the plan of his campaign, will be its dominant issue. It is a reiteration of what he said in his speech of acceptance and what he said at Seagirt. The same thought was later repeated in the address before the democratic convention at Columbus. Charges of mud slinging notwithstanding, Mr. Davis proposes to keep before the people in the course of the campaign the mistakes of the present administration. There is going to be no attacking of President Coolidge, no attempt to fix upon him responsibility for the scandals of the past year. But at the same time the democratic candidate insists that the mistakes and failures of the republican party must not be hidden behind the new president's skirts without an effort.

A campaign along this line has one obvious advantage from the democratic point of view. It tends to keep the administration on the defensive in an issue where the case for the defense is admittedly weak. And in view of the good war record of the last democratic administration and the failure of the republican party, despite its campaign pledges, to bring to light a single case of maladministration or corruption in the face of the heavy war expenditure, it opens the door for serious reflection as to how high of the major parties is more properly to be entrusted with the government.

The democratic party was in charge of the administration at a period when opportunities for graft and corruption were almost limitless, yet no charge involving the party was ever sustained.

On the other hand, the republican party, in power for the past three and a half year, has established a record honeycombed with graft, fraud and various forms of inexcusable corruption.

Mr. Davis has well defined the issue. If honesty in government is desired by the people of the nation they must support the democratic ticket.

DEFECTIVE BRAKES

A five-year-old boy was killed in Hackensack the other day by an automobile which could not be stopped efficiently owing to defective brakes.

This is not a new story. It is an old story. Defective brakes are probably causing more accidents than careless driving.

Driving cars with brakes that are not ready for efficient service is careless driving in another sense than the generally accepted talk of "careless driving."

The driver with bad brakes may be an otherwise careful driver. He may not be a speeder, he may do all manner of careful things to keep out of accidents, but if he cannot command quick control of his car, in stopping, he is not a careful driver.

A careful driver will put more importance on keeping his brakes tested than he will in keeping his motor hitting on all cylinders.

Being able to stop a car is more important in a serious, necessary way, than being able to make a car go.

In many cities throughout the country campaigns have been started against defective brakes.

It is important work, it is work that should not call for any campaign, for every man should see to it that the brakes on his car are in good condition at all times. But when they fail, it is then necessary for others to see to it that the brakes are in good working condition.

COSTLY BITTERNESS

It is truly unfortunate that the little things cause the big troubles in this busy world. The reason is usually that said little things are considered with a seriousness entirely out of proportion to their importance in actual life. A disagreement that might well be dismissed with a smile becomes a cauldron of hard feeling unnecessarily.

If that returned dividends, it might be excused. But it merely serves to make life more worrisome and generally miserable. The happy man is he who can take things as they come, refusing to embitter his own life over the petty arguments which in the end have little bearing on his own welfare and in almost every instance mould themselves for the betterment of the majority of the people.

This does not mean to belittle the public expression on any subject. It merely points out that there are very few public questions worth the loss of a friend or the disruption of amicable relationships between fellow citizens.

MAKERS OF CASS COUNTY

The writer of this sketch, Louis Neitzel, was born in Pommern, Prussia, Germany in 1854, attended the common schools until 14 years of age and was confirmed in the faith of the Lutheran church. When 15 years old he began to learn his chosen profession, that of a blacksmith. The work was very hard and the hours long— from 3 a. m. until 8 p. m. the year around, and he still at this date is a "early riser," a habit of early training.

On October 8, 1872 he emigrated to the land of his dreams—America, landing November 4, 1872, the day when U. S. Grant was elected president for his first term. He worked the first four months at $3 per month as a helper in a brick yard, then he went to Manlius, New York, working in a tannery. The panic of 1873 found the writer out of work, but not discouraged. Not being able to find work at his trade, he worked for a butcher three years at Turle, England, New Jersey, 1874, he landed in South Bend, Ind., where he worked in the Studebaker shops, operating a trip hammer for nearly five years. Here he was converted in January, 1877 and joined the Evangelical church. Here he found the girl who he thought would make a good wife and on February 19, 1878, they were duly married. Her father was the pastor of the First Evangelical church of South Bend, the Rev. M. Hoeft. In the year 1882 they came to Nebraska. He later entered the ministry and was appointed to Wahoo mission with six preaching appointments. This meant much travel; his annual trips running about 6,000 miles. After two years he was sent to Omaha and here he served two years when he was transferred to Madison, where he labored for three years, when the conference sent him to Milford. Here they were two years. At this time, this was in 1890, the C. R. I. & P. R. V. was built through Cass county. When he learned about this he decided to come here and work as a new town. So on April 7, 1891, he landed on the present town site which had no name yet. He was accorded the privilege of naming the new town and he called it "Eickhof" in which name Mr. E. objected and it was named after one of the railroad officials.

Mr. Neitzel put the first store building in the town site. Bonemeier and Fickes had put up a store building, but it was not on platted ground, and was closed when he came. In May, 1892, Mr. E. T. Tool and son, and Mr. Neitzel decided to build a store to make this their home. Hass Bros built the same year he did a general store on the site of the store run by G. Baur today. Mr. Neitzel is today the oldest settler in Murdock, with A. J. Tool next in line. Many names have to be placed in the history books. The first school house was built in 1892 and the second in 1924. The first religious services were held in the present depot by Rev. Jacobs. Soon we called a Methodist minister and a class was organized. Meetings were held in the school house.

Their children grew up in Murdock but all have left home and he is alone with his companion of 46 years married life. The children are all married, our son, A. J. Neitzel is a farmer on a farm north of Murdock; Mrs. O. J. Hitchcock in Havelock, Nebraska; Mrs. P. A. Hartung in Kansas City, Missouri; Mrs. S. B. MacDiarmid in Omaha.

LAD STARTS TRAVELING

Yesterday, Chief of Police William Heinrichsen was called upon to assist in locating Donald, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Erickson, who had wandered away from the home on South Sixth street and caused the family a great deal of worry. The mother of the little lad made a hurried search of the neighborhood to try and locate him but without success and then the chief of police was called upon to assist in the search as it was feared the little boy might get injured in getting out and being run over by a car. The chief of police finally located the boy at the Burlington station as he had evidently decided that he would get out and see a little of the world on his own volition and without the restraining influence of the mother and father. When found by the chief, Donald stated that he was well pleased that he was prevented from carrying out his desire.
