Fulfilling the Law, Review

The present quarter's lessons began with the birth of Jesus the Christ and included his boyhood, his temptation, his baptism, the selecting of his disciples, his first miracle, his cleansing of the Temple, the marriage feast at Cana, the discourse at Nazareth and the healing of the leper. Following the manifestation through all his acts, the demonstration that he was the Son of God and that he came to fill the mission on which he was sent, he demonstrated more strongly he had come not to break the law but to fulfill it and this he did in every instance. When John the Baptist said "I have need to be baptized of thee and comest thou to me," the Master replied: "Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." Teaching it was necessary to obey the law. His obedience was but the fulfilling of prophecy as his coming had been foretold and he had broken the law to begin with and when one had the leprosy he was compelled to remove himself from society and to cry out when anyone was about to approach him, "Unclean! Unclean!"

This he did not do, for with a faith which removed mountains, he rushed into the presence of the Master and throwing himself at his feet, said, "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." With that compassion which always characterized the Master, he reached forth his hand and touching the leprosy creature but still one who he had come to save, said, "I will; be thou clean." The leper immediately was cleansed. This was the demonstration of Divinity and true humanity when with the rotting of the flesh and the putrid sores making the leper the most disgusting object, the Master by his touch instilled into the man a faith and a confidence that he was to be cleansed from his pestilence.

The flesh which had been rotting from the bones and putrid came again as the flesh of a little, clean, pure and beautiful with no taint of disease and the former leper was clean from all that had made him diseased and miserable for so long. Christ straightway instructed him to go to the priest and show himself as the law required and offer the offering which the law of Moses required for a testimony to them for his cleansing. The priests then gave him a certificate of health and he was to restore him to his former place in society.

There are people who do not respect certain laws and wink at their non-enforcement, still are very zealous of having others enforced. We all want the murderer sentenced to the utmost and a good strong penalty imposed on the horse thief, the auto perforce, the chicken puffer, the one who would set fire to your home or barn, the burglar and the highwayman but we wink at the infraction of the law by the man who has a little on his hip for commercial purposes or in other words a bootlegger. We consider it none of our business when a libertine seeks to ruin a household when he debauches a daughter or pollutes the wife of another and says that is none of my business, let the officers look after that. Good government, the preservation of society and the welfare of the public depends on the fact that every citizen shall stand behind the law and enforce the same through their duly authorized offices and that all shall work in conjunction with them.

We have in mind just now an instance which occurred not so far from here. A certain business man in a small town was peddling a little booze and was visiting a joint where the law was rinning him. The good (?) citizens said, "It is none of my business as long as he does not bother me." But when that man had to go to the wall because the gang trimmed him and left the good citizens holding the bag, with him owing them a lot of bills, they could see that it was some of their business. The good of society, the stability of the business house, the better influence of the church, the safety of the schools are more secure when the laws are enforced. The measure of a man is taken by what he does and the way he does it for in the words of John Clements, in his lines on a skeleton:

"Say did these fingers deliver the mine?
Or with the envied rubies shine;
To how the oak or wear the gem,
Can nothing now avail to them.
But if the page of truth they sought,
And comfort to the mourner brought,
Those hands a richer mead shall claim,
Than all that wait in wealth or fame."
