LAKE FISH TO BE PROTECTED THE COMING WINTER

Governor Now Has $50,000 at His Disposal to Be Used to Protect Fish in Nebraska's Waters

"I guess we'll have to give that money to the democrats," said Governor Bryan when asked if he intends to expend the $50,000 appropriated by the last legislature to keep fish from freezing in lakes and swamps in Nebraska. "The recent election appears to disprove that the democrats were made fish of against their will."

There are only forty-two days left of the governor's term of office and if he does not spend the appropriation Governor-elect McMillen will fall heir to the task. The incoming governor will have until next July to dispose of the money.

There has been great pressure upon Governor Bryan to take advantage of the right to dispose of the money. The legislature and should be spent under direction of the governor and chief game warden. George Koester, chief game warden, has been willing. He has reported to the governor that the owner of a lake in the northern part of the state is willing to part with a lake of about 250 acres. This land in that vicinity is assessed at 23 or 24 an acre. Governor Bryan has indicated no desire to purchase. The end of his term is nearing a close and still he has given no sign that he will direct the expenditure of the money.

RADIO BROADCASTING PUBLIC NECESSITY, SAYS REPORT

Commissioner of Navigation in Annual Report Says That Radio Is Indispensable.

Covering in detail the many phases of the operation of the Bureau of Navigation, Commissioner D. B. Carson in his annual report to Secretary of Commerce, Herbert Hoover, made public today, stresses the phenomenal growth of radio and the necessity of adequate legislation to provide for future developments in this field.

Although cooperation has enabled the Supervisory Radio Office of the Bureau of Navigation to function under existing law without serious hardship to anyone, the commissioner states that a more defined program is desirable.

"It seems probable," he says, "that broadcasting is permanently established as a public necessity and may be considered as indispensable in the average home as the telephone."

"The success achieved by this country has encouraged many other countries to utilize this important means of establishing direct contact with the public."

"The question of who will pay for broadcasting in the opinion of Mr. Carson, does not appear to require immediate consideration."

"The public will probably continue to contribute liberally through cost of equipment purchased. At present there does not appear to be a more equitable way of distributing the cost, while, on the other hand, such stations must have considerable advertising value justifying the expense of operation where owners are not benefited through sales of radio apparatus."

"The amateur radio operators are searching for new things in radio and they should be given new fields to explore if their interest is to be held according to the report. They have succeeded in effecting transcontinental communication and have found it possible to intercommunicate with European stations on short wave lengths. In view of their past achievement it seems proper that they be given a few narrow working and experimental channels below 160 meters to encourage further development."

Declaring that safe navigation of merchant vessels depends largely upon efficient radio equipment, Commissioner Carson reports that at the end of the year under review there were 271 American ships equipped with radio, not including government vessels. During the year there were 7221 inspections made in the demand that protection to the traveling public be essential, as compared with 6732 the previous year. During the same period 1,577 inspections were made of ships voluntarily equipped, compared with 1,124 the previous year; and 374 American ship stations were inspected for

VALUING U. S. RAILROADS SLOW AND COSTLY TASK

Washington, Nov. 25.—Completion of the groundwork of valuing American railroads, which the interstate commerce commission has been carrying on since 1914, is not yet in sight.

When the work will be brought up to date, officials point out, depends largely upon when congress makes the necessary funds available. So far the commission has spent some $25,000,000 in the task of primary valuation and the expense to the railroads themselves has been heavy.

Primary valuation, which forms the basis for the commission to determine a railroad's present day worth, is now 90 per cent completed with respect to making up the original reports. These reports are reviewed and corrected.
