It looks as though a man can succeed in this world and be very solitary, but when he fails he drags otners down with him invariably.

No matter how poor a stick a man is, nor how great a criminal he is, some woman will be found who loves him, and his crime, if it does not break his own heart, will break the heart of others.

Very often criminals are quite sensitive to the feelings of other peo-A fire siren in the early morning ple. If they were a little more senswould react upon those who love them they would not go into crime

It is a thing to be reckoned with but most of the suffering in this world is vicarious, that is, it is done for others, whether we weep over our own weakness or not, others are bound to suffer.

There is an old song that says men must work and women must work. Whether this be true or not it is true that no man can go wrong without dragging some woman down with him.

The same ties of society that help man up, bolster him in his success Baseball players are flocking to and add to his joys, are those ties by himself and not effect anyone If you can't make a living any else, it would not be so bad. But the have to consider is that of weeping and sympathetic women. Besides every gallows there stands a little mother waiting for the body of her boy. Outside every prison there stand the mother and wife whose confidence has been misplaced.

The worst part of paying for our sins is not the suffering that we ourselves endure but the suffering we bring upon other people.

This is the more poignant and bitter in proportion as others love us loyally and cling to us in spite of everything. The more loyal the love, the bitterer the disillusionment.

--:0:--THE LA FOLLETTE EXECUTION

The Old Guard in the senate is piously sharpening its knife. It has received a sacred message from the people. La Follette must be carved from his important committee positions. And since the job must be done eventually, why not now? Let the sobriety of righteousness, the judicial exterior, be maintained, but let the good work go on, the work of stamping out heresy for the good of country and party.

For here, indeed, is to be found the spirit of the inquisition. La Follette's offering is not that he is a legislative menace. He is not chairstate commerce committee. Even were he chairman he could not diced by obstruction. That is the senfrom reformers who irk at the delays ing described real estate, to-wit:

La Follette's real offense is that he defied the party ticket in the late election. As it turned out he did not in fact endanger the election of Coolidge even though it may have seemed during the campaign that he did. He even drew from the able title will be furnished strength of the opposition as Coolidge partisans predicted he would. But this thing must be done again. No senator must be allowed to think Carl D. Ganz, that he can rebel against the party ticket and retain any of the benefits of the party machinery. The religion of politics bestows its choicest curse on the non-conformist.

Though the La Follette elimination will be conducted beneath an exterior of holy indignation it will be an execution of partisan judgment for the deeply-dyed and doublydamned rebel.
