GOVERNOR McMULLEN IN THE ROLE OF PEACEMAKER

Proposes Arbitration For Settlement Of Dispute Between Sugar Men of Nebraska.

Governor McMullen has proposed arbitration for a settlement of a dispute between the beet growers' association of western Nebraska and the Great Western Sugar company of Scottsbluff.

The growers desired some changes in contracts with the sugar company this year but the company is reported to have declined to treat with any one who is a member of the association. It is time to plant sugar beets and there is danger of loss of crop if the controversy is not settled.

The governor of Nebraska proposes to appoint one person to meet with one chosen by the association and one appointed by the sugar company. He has asked Governor McKelvey of Colorado to take similar steps in his state.

KEEP HAND ON WHEEL

Yesterday afternoon Chief of Police William Hinrichsen was called out to the vicinity of the Platte river wagon bridge to look after the destruction of a canine belonging to a grading outfit located near there, while in that locality the chief witnessed a small auto smashup that demonstrated that a driver of a car should keep his mind on managing the car, and his hands on the steering wheel. The accident, the chief states, shows that running a car and a petting party at the same time can't be done and that don't mean maybe.

alive, and even that little would cause her to suffer for hours after with gas bloating, biliousness, headaches that almost drove her distracted, and faint, dizzy spells. We spent hundreds of dollars every year, but it was money wasted.

"Finally, some friends told us about Karank and we got some of it. Just imagine our surprise when after a few days my wife began to pick up and was feeling a whole lot better. Karank just seemed to work like magic. Now she is like her old self again. Her appetite is fine, she don't suffer from dyspepsia and stomach troubles any more and she has a good healthy look. In fact, she is just like a different woman."

Karank is sold in Plattsmouth exclusively by F. G. Fricke & Co., and by the leading druggist in every town.

"Karnak has surely been a blessing in our home. Mrs. Reisch was a very sick woman for years and we couldn't find anything to help her. She suffered night and day, weak, sick and all run-down. She scarcely ate enough to keep a bird

Brood Sow "Mileage"

One man can take a Ford and drive it nineteen miles on a gallon of gas and then turn it over to his neighbor who can get only twelve miles on a gallon. In order to do it, raising hogs is much the same as getting mileage out of a car. One man can market eight pigs per sow. The other can market only four or five. The man who is raising eight knows most about pigs. It may be that he feeds on better but it stands to reason that he is doing something better. In the case of the poor driver and the Ford, probably everything was just right except the spark lever. That was enough to cut down the efficiency of the Ford. In the case of the man who raises only five pigs per sow, probably without doubt the trouble is due to dirty, filthy pens, sheds and pastures which will ruin the profit end of any pig crop. No matter how nutritious the feed, the young pigs are allowed to pick up worm eggs and disease germs which cause "bull nose," "elephant hide" and "intestinal troubles," the number of pigs raised, the size of the pigs which survive and the hog man's profit will all be reduced. The man who cleans the farrowing pens with boiling lye water, washes the udders of the sows before placing them in clean pens, moves the sows and pigs from the farrowing pens to clean sheds in a clean pasture, and feeds the pigs until they weigh a hundred pounds, will get the most mileage out of their sows.

Forty thousand dollars is the amount that was paid to farmers for cream, butter, eggs and poultry in the month of March, by the Lehigh Poultry Co., at Elmwood. The farmers all live in area of 12 square miles, probably a total of 30 farms.

A swine club was organized at Nehawka with five members. Harry Knabe is of local leader. The members are: Frank and Halleck Pollard, Charles Rose and Sterling and LaVon Ingwerson.

CHICKENS CREATE STIR

From Wednesday's Daily—

Chief of Police William Hinrichsen has been busy the past few days in settling several cases of the old springtime complaint—chickens scratching up the yards of the neighbors and as usual the settlement of the difficulty has fallen to the lot of the law. The householder that has planted his radishes and lettuce and the attractive carrot and beet bites very much to discover that some stray hen has selected the vegetable bed for a scratching and dusting place, and it seems that these newly spaded or plowed garden plots have a great lure for the hen. The scratching of the chickens leads to protests and the owner of the fowls naturally stands on their constitutional right to life liberty and the pursuit of happiness as well as the rearing of chickens, and from these two factors comes the disputes that lead to the police being called
