REPENTANCE

When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die: if he turn from his sin, and do that which is lawful and right; none of his sins that he hath committed shall be mentioned unto him: he shall surely live.

Dithmar a poor second to Bob La Pollette.

One of Ford's planes was wrecked at Omaha.

Fliers pictures Omaha as air port of the middle west.

Do your engaging early, as the price of diamond rings is going up.

Airplanes seem to be crushing right and left all over the United States.

Attempts have been made to assassinate King George, but they were nipped in time.

Omaha festivities will be high next week—Ak-Sar-Ben and American Legion convention.

The state of Indiana has 53 villages and towns with names containing but three letters.

The condition of affairs in the United States doesn't seem to get any better, but rather worse.

The wise little boy who doesn't believe in Santa Claus goes into a man who believes in politicians.

President Coolidge desires that the postoffice department issue a stamp bearing the likeness of Woodrow Wilson.

It was announced that the president hopes congress will pass a bill to permit reorganization of government departments and commissions.

Photographs have been taken by means of a solid steel ball in place of ordinary lens. The light goes around instead of through this model of lens.

It's just as well that pugilistic champions refuse to fight often than once a year. This country has to pay some attention to its regular business.

Four convicts broke out of a Michigan jail with can openers. This is a novelty, though there have been many who engineered their escape by means of corkscrews.

The mayor of Atlantic City says there won't be any beauty pageants after this year. That is, no official ones. The public will continue to get its usual eyeful.

If everyone that is talking of going to the American Legion next week goes, who will stay at home to take care of the business, or will there be any business?

Friday afternoon is the only time when a Moroccan wife is permitted to leave her home unattended. Then she may only visit the cemetery, from which men are excluded for that afternoon.

The ex-kaiser has written a letter saying that the war had taught him the necessity of co-operation between Germany and Russia when the monarchy should be restored in both countries. As the gentlemen said on the scaffold, his hanging would certainly be a lesson to him.

London dispatches say that the latest thing is for men to carry leather handbags which hold their pipes, cigarette keys and all the other junk which we usually carry in our pockets. We have been sneering at women and pitying them on account of their lack of pockets and their consequent annoying need to carry handbags—and now we are about to give up our freedom and encumber our hands!

Hardly a day passes that someone in an automobile is not killed at a railroad crossing. The number of automobiles in this country has become so great that it is now the duty of governments—state, county and city—to see to it that all railroad crossings on main highways are provided with a viaduct or a subway. Traffic stopped fording streams in the country years ago. Every stream on a main highway has a bridge. The same protection must be afforded at railroad crossings.

Did Clifford B. Cook kill his wife? Is the query now.

Hurrying through life takes up entirely too much time.

Canada produced about $20,000,000 worth of honey last year.

Telephotography is being used experimentally for telegraphing checks.

If reports are true, young La Follette's plurality will reach over 100,000.

Nothing is more pitiful than to see a bashful child run and try to hide behind his mother's knickers.

Less people are being killed by motor cars, but there's a reason. There are fewer people to work on.

The wonder is that anyone ever thought of the phrase, "the quick and the dead," before the age of automobiles.

Belgians who turned French to reach the United States are arrested. The trick may bring deportation of all of them.

"Here's where we add a little new blood to the family," said the mosquito to his wife when a stranger entered the room.

The Royal Barger, which was built by King William of England for his queen in 1869, is probably the oldest boat in the country.

Florida realtors must have a supreme contempt for Spain, which sold all of Florida for $5,000,000, the price of an ordinary corner lot in that state now.

A Nevada man, 73 years old, wearing a beard twenty-two feet long and riding a bicycle, was struck and injured by an automobile. Let this be a lesson of some kind.

A woman suing for divorce claims her husband makes from $18,000 to $26,000 a week bootlegging liquor from Canada. Can the courts recognize that source of income in fixing alimony?

Silk stockings so fine that a pair will pass through a wedding ring are worn by wealthy women in Paris. Made with rose point lace insertions, the stockings cost fifteen hundred francs a pair.

As we understand the French and American commissions feel they have reached an agreement in principle on the debt payment. Now it only remains for them to reach an agreement in interest.

Henry Ford's declaration that the country will be prosperous for the next one hundred years will discourage, we hope, a number of ambitious gents who seem determined to get it all in the next twenty-five.

Election officials in a Pennsylvania town found 105 voters registered from one three-story frame house. It is to be hoped that philanthropists will do something to remedy such terrible housing conditions.

Some of our far-sighted good people are already packing away their outgrown tuxedos and evening gowns to send along in February to the hardy adventurers who went out to reclaim Florida this fall.

A Chicago airplane company announces its ships will transport passengers at so much per pound and for once in history the big boys will be forced to pay for taking up all of the seat space in the smoker.

It's difficult to account for the confidence of the Rifians unless they really were deceived by all that was said a few years ago about the rights of small nations and the beauty of the cause of self determination.

Just about this time of the year we are always regaled with the story of a cotton picking machine that will really work. But, somehow or other, we never see any of these machines in the fields during the following year.

"Organization," says some wise fellow, "is the art of getting men to respond like thoroughbreds. When you click to a thoroughbred, he gives you all the speed, strength of heart and sinew in him. When you click to a jackass, he kicks."

CONGRESS TOO BIG

Programmers of next year's congressional doings are reported as planning a reappointment bill increasing the size of the house of representatives from 435 to 485 members, so as to "take care" of all present congressmen, but with the understanding that this increase shall be the last.

If a limit is to be set, why not set it now?

The constitution provides that there shall be a reappointment provided that there shall be a reappointment every ten years, but now we are half way through one reappointment period and nothing has been done, because the representation of any state, and the only other way is to increase the whole number of congressmen, to give additional representation to the states which have increased in population, without reducing any others.

It has always been done this way before, and the hesitation now is due to a realization that the time has come to call a halt.

The new scheme would "pass the buck" to the congress of 1932, whose members are no more likely to be self-denying patriots than the present membership.

The proper thing is to keep the membership no larger than it now is, and redistribute that.

Congress is already too large. The British parliament, to be sure, is much larger, as are most of the legislative bodies of Europe. And they are not too large.

But they are differently organized. They have a small central leadership, the "government," which takes all the initiative and does or directs most of the work.

They have not a hundredth as many bills, or a thousandth as many local matters to attend to. The only function of the ordinary member is to vote his party program.

Seven hundred members can do that as well as four hundred, especially as forty of them constitute a quorum, and ordinarily it makes no difference whether the others attend at all or not.

Our system reverses all this. Under it, three hundred members could do all the work much better than six hundred, besides restoring the house to some of its former significance in the legislative scheme.

Congress is more important than congressmen. If congress will consider the welfare of congress, it will not increase its present numbers.

THE HUMAN PILLARS

Excavators at the gate of the Imperial palace in Tokio find skeletons buried twelve feet below the bed of the stream which surrounds the palace.

They are skeletons of men buried in an upright position.

Japanese scientists say the skeletons are the remains of men who, centuries ago, offered themselves in martyrdom as human pillars for the immortalization of the cornerstones used in a great castle.

The tradition of "human pillars" is old in Japan. It was believed that if men were buried alive beneath the cornerstone of a great structure the gods would forever make the structure strong.

Human pillars were honored. They were buried in a standing position.

We no longer bury men alive to immortalize great institutions. But men and women bury themselves alive in sacrificial effort.

John McVeigh left the lonely island of Molokai in the Pacific a few weeks ago after a quarter of a century of service. He was superintendent of the leper colony—the saddest spot on earth.

There are others engaged in the same work on that lonely island in a far ocean. There is someone to take the place of John McVeigh.

The great enterprises of the world have gone forward on the carts that carried martyrs to their graves.

The rank and file cursed Copernicus and Galileo. And the rank and file were rewarded by being given a new world.

All these were human pillars buried alive at the base of a great achievement.

They have immortalized the cornerstone of enduring architecture.

A writer, after noting that Alexander, Napoleon, Hanibal and Caesar were bowlegged, concludes that bowleggedness is a mark of bravery. If that is true, what a Red Battalion of Death could be recruited along Petticoat Lane most any sunny afternoon these days!

It would appear upon the face of the reports that there are some very easy marks in Omaha when a solitary bandit walked into a jewelry store and made away with $10,000 worth of watches and diamond rings, which was done about 8:30 Tuesday morning.

Same Price for over 35 Years
Why pay war prices?

A newspaper investigator experiments with inhabitants of Chicago and reports that the women of that city are less friendly than the men. The women of any city are more suspicious of strangers than the men are. That's why confidence men usually work on the male population.

"Evolution For John Doe," is the title of a best selling book. It is always an interesting experiment. Efforts have been made for two hundred years, both in the law and out, to civilize John Doe, but he simply won't evolve.

The new pant styles for cake eaters show legs about the size and general contour of grain sacks. These promise to be a great boon to those spindle shanks who have been openly accused of having no visible means of support.

Current discussion of the prevalence of crime suggests that, as in the case of the weather, everybody talks about it, but nobody does anything.

The difference between law and custom is that it takes a lot of nerve to violate a custom.

After all, the research bureau of the Council of Churches came as near to saying that prohibition is a failure as we could expect it to come. It is not, let us recall, occupying a wet point of view.
