JESUS TEACHES AND HEALS

And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people.—Bible.

Navy may dodge Mitchell issue.

Father's birthstone is a grindstone.

A wintry tone for sure Saturday morning.

If you have dollars the world thinks you have sense.

The trouble with human rights seems to be they overlap.

All you need to know to make a success is all you don't know.

The people who can do as they please don't know what to do.

Loafing in England is called unemployment, and the people get paid for it.

If your head bumps the top every three seconds, you are on the right detour.

Consider the ant. He is so busy working he breaks up other people's picnics.

When a boy on the farm hears of light breakfast he thinks they are the kind eaten by lamplight.

The automatic traffic signal may be all right, but it has not yet been made to ball out anybody.

It's getting so that we are more certain of the summer coal strike than of the winter coal supply.

And now we guess that old toilet favorite of the vintage of 1924—Florida water, will bob up again.

The wise little boy who doesn't believe in Santa Claus grows up into a man who believes in politicians.

The silk stockings were discovered in the sixteenth century, but not all of it was discovered until recently.

Longfellow said that man must be either a hammer or an anvil. But he overlooked the fellow who is simply bellows.

Maybe we must be ashamed in having more crime than any other country but we can take pride in having the most reformers.

The east is trying to find a substitute for coal, but probably a more satisfactory discovery would be a substitute for coal strikes.

The cousin of the late czar who keeps on hearing calls to the Russian throne will eventually come under suspicion of being a ventriloquist.

"Mad humor of Russians," says a headline, "found vent in setting fire to a poet's hair." Still, we should not be too harsh with the Russians. Perhaps there was no club handy.

A college professor says the sole of one's shoe is an indication of his character. We tremble to appear before a character reader, going around as we often do in half-soles and rubber heels.

One writer, answering the questionnaire, concerning the alleged fight between Dempsey and Willis, says it has all the importance of a new funding scheme for the war debt, and about as much speed.

It was generally conceded that the breaks would decide the world's series, and we guess it was a pretty good break for Washington when they picked up that kid Walter Johnson, nineteen or twenty years ago.

A doctor's little daughter, deeply interested in radio, glanced one morning into her father's office where the doctor was examining the heart and lungs of a patient, and inquired sweetly: "Getting any new stations, daddy?"

P. Connors jeers at the Omaha weather man who furnished President Coolidge a disagreeable day for his stay in Omaha. We haven't the statistics to prove it, but we have an impression that P. Connors's own weather record for visiting celebrities isn't perfect.

Killing frosts all over Nebraska.

Philosophy is usually about all a philosopher has.

Warmer weather predicted—next summer, anyhow.

Wonder what a sandwich looked like before lettuce was invented?

Psychology is what makes $14.98 seem vastly more economical than $15.

The fact that nobody loves a fat man seems to worry everybody but the fat man.

Two million lost in New York gem swindle!—Headline. That's nothing for New York.

In Chicago a man named Mr. Half got married and you might say he and his wife are one.

Volstead Stands by Law—Headline. Queer daddy that won't stand by his own bantering.

Making the nations all one family won't help. It's even harder to collect debts from relatives.

M. Caillaux says: "I am never disappointed. We can't all sign agreements like Mr. Baldwin."

With the advent of the flapjacks an sausage season, we will all be pan-Americans for a while.

General John Rea McQuigg of Cleveland, Ohio, to guide the legionnaires in 1926. A good man.

Fancy belts are the vogue. Many young fellows are wearing them just above where they should be used.

The Geneva conference prohibited the use of gas in war. Now can't it forbid the use of gas in starting war?

The Sead sea is fishless. In this way it is similar to all other bodies of water. Unless fish wear muzzles.

Grand opera is very hard to sing. But not so hard as singing "Home Sweet Home" while reading a coal bill.

Men who like to sew wild oats want somebody else to gather the harvest, but it doesn't work out that way.

This country could be worse. In Siberia the soil freezes 65 feet deep. Imagine digging 66 feet to fishing worms.

California has too many quakes, even if they are only slight. And Florida too many mosquitoes. So you better stay in Nebraska.

The minister who said that men in this land of the free were "hired like slaves" failed to mention the fact that these are the first "slaves."

Every killing of a gunman in Chicago by a gunman has to be avenged by another gunman. Thus appears the silver lining on the cloud of Chicago crime.

The real physician, says a speaker, is an idealist who is trying to make the world look better. Why don't they devote more attention to wars, then, instead of tonsils.

President Coolidge saved a little money on his transportation to Omaha by taking a drawing room on a scheduled train instead of the usual special. Of course, the administration will bear this in mind and give the railroads the benefit of this and other grievances when they appeal for the next rate increase.

A SURPLUS OF GEMS

Mrs. Jessie Woolworth Donahue, heiress to the Woolworth millions, was robbed of jewels worth $750,000 in a New York hotel. A thief calmly walked into her apartment and took the jewels from a bureau drawer, while she was in another room.

Are such costly jewels worth all the worry they cause?

Our best guess is that Mrs. Donahue isn't as happy with gems worth a million as any poor boy is with 10 cents worth of shiny new marbles.

Dyspepsia is America's curse. To restore digestion, normal weight, good health and purify the blood, use Burdock Blood Bitters. Sold at all drug stores. Price, $1.25.

KNOWING AND DOING

Knowing how to drive an automobile is one thing, and the ability to drive safely is something quite different. This is the judgment of Rear Admiral William S. Sims, as expressed to the National Safety Council. Almost anyone can acquire with comparatively little effort the knowledge of automobile mechanics necessary to understand just how everything works. Indeed, one may have the genius to know machinery as most of us know the alphabet. But still he may not be a driver of first-rate ability.

What is needed nowadays, especially in large cities is clear-headedness and sound judgment and the ability to face emergencies calmly and make decisions instantly. These qualities may go with thorough mechanical knowledge, but they may not. Probably everyone who drives a car will agree with Admiral Sims that they are even more desirable than the most mechanical knowledge. The working of the machine must be known; it is the elementary thing, but by itself it does not amount to much.

How, then, are we to make sure that drivers possess the qualifications which Admiral Sims considers so desirable? Manifestly, the only safe method of acquirement is by practice and experience. This is easily said, but how is experience to be obtained unless one practices? And is not precisely this business of practicing in crowded streets one of the most perilous elements in our traffic troubles?

If you say, arbitrarily, that no one except an experienced driver is competent to manage an automobile you prevent anyone from gaining experience. Manifestly, it will work. We must go in the old way. All that can be demanded is that inexperienced drivers exercise even greater caution than that expected from older hands. And if, by repeated offenses, a novice proves himself temperamentally unfit for the responsibilities of driving the police may take effective measures to banish him from the streets.

The inexperienced driver we shall always have with us, for there are always men and women who gain experience. What is mostly needed is that the inexperienced driver retain a wholesome consciousness of his inexperience. The greater need is not so much in actual lack of experience as in premature confidence. With due caution and not undue humility the beginner may progress safely through successive stages to the desirable condition of expertness and no bones will be broken.

A HUMAN JUDGE

Two girls in Orange, N. J., engaged in a fist fight on the street and the traffic officer arrested them. They had broken two or three laws and ordinances and certainly had some sort of punishment coming to them, tho they were only school girls. When the case was heard, the cop testified that one of the girls had worn brilliantly colored garters. Then the judge dismissed the case, but said that he would tell the board of education to see that the girls dressed more modestly in the future. Judges are made of the same material as the rest of us. As soon as this one heard about those garters, he just couldn't think of anything else. He forgot about the fight, the obstruction of traffic, the unladylike language, and everything else. His attention was concentrated on the garters, and on the garters he rendered his decision.

NOT A PROBLEM

Beyond question the extensive building of good roads has brought about a new status for the town, big and little, as it has for the country generally. What this status finally shall be is not in the nature of a problem so much as a process that is bound to take its own course to a large extent. Good roads extend the commercial reach of every town.

Whether that reach may be made profitable depends much on the town itself for the reach of other places has been extended similarly. Better roads bring into or near the towns greatly increased travel. Whether that travel shall be made profitable or negligible from a business point of view depends again very much on the invitation the town affords.

The lengths of a mile vary in different countries, and also in different means of transportation.

THIS EARTH OF OURS

A gigantic laboratory lies in the heart of the earth. It is such a huge storehouse of riches that our minds can hardly grasp the size and significance of it.

In this almost measureless laboratory there are being constantly manufactured the material resources upon which civilization is built.

Oil, coal, gas, iron are being made in this laboratory by the wonderful processes of nature.

There is not just a definite amount of assets in the earth. This material is being made anew. The question is whether the increasing demands of men are not using it up at such a rate that in spite of its increase it will all run out.

The countless generations to come will prove whether or not the laboratory processes are fast enough.

The earth is cooling off. Scientists say that some day it will be burned out, cold and pale, like billions of years in the future. Man can have the earth for his dwelling place for ages to come.

There is nothing more interesting to contemplate than these mysterious changes which are going on in the huge storehouses of the planet.

Did you know, for example, that the area covered by the United States is wearing away about one foot every 10,000 years? The very mountain ranges with which we are familiar today will one day have disappeared.

There have been mountain ranges in the far ages of the past which have come and gone. The sea covers them. In years to come the land areas of the earth and the water areas may change places. Where the United States is now, scientists say, the day may come when there will be a vast ocean.

Why when we read about "coast and geodetic survey" we are overlooking matters of the deepest interest. Shifting lands and shifting seas, the magnificent workshops of nature and the inexhaustible riches of the planet, are thrilling matters.

OUR GOVERNMENT

This is the newest great nation and one of the oldest.

Edwin C. Aldrich of Oakland, California, claims to be the only living son of the Revolution.

His father, Caleb Aldrich, entered the Revolutionary army as a drummer boy, at 14, and afterward a private.

His son, born when the father was 70, is now 87.

Yet, of all nations, we are the one with the oldest constitution and the only one whose form of government has not been radically changed.

Our experiment of freedom, then the newest and rashest thing in the world, is now the oldest and most conservative.

Don't worry about "radicalism" in America.

A country whose conservatism has outlasted all the rest of the world is not going to try any rash experiments.
