SEEW AND YE SHALL FIND

Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

The melancholy days have come; The leaf is sere and brown; It's time to put the old stove up And take the screen door down.

Old Winter on the jump again. Is Omaha again in the throes of crime?

When money talks we never criticize its grammar.

The earliest winter we have experienced in many years.

The October Indian summer this year was in reality a January thaw.

Mayor Hylan welcomes the Butter and Egg men from Nebraska to New York.

This is one year without Indian Summer. Whither are we drifting, anyway?

The people should attend church at least once on Sunday, and oftener if possible.

The Ways and Means Committee has resolved to repeal the income tax publicity law.

A solid roadbed is needed just as bad for a single track mind as for a double track one.

Bare plot to overthrow the King of Italy, also to assassinate Mussolini and set up a Republic.

The Atchison Globe complains that many women who play a fine game of bridge can't add their scores.

"The ministry will carry on," exclaims Premier Palleve. Yes, certainly. But will it last the week out?

The fact that every cloud has a silver lining doesn't keep you from getting wet if you stay out in the rain.

Divorces are greatly on the increase throughout the country. What is the matter with the people anyway?

Well, everybody will be glad to learn that the Stillmans have patched it up at last and have agreed to get a divorce.

What becomes of all the winners of beauty contests? They can't go back home. The catty remarks about them would break the stoutest heart.

The attempts of a German scientist to make gold are being discredited. It may turn out, after all, that the best way to make money is by hard work.

Perhaps this generation doesn't know much about the constitution of the United States because it has to devote all its time to studying the traffic rules.

About the most unsatisfactory thing we know of is for a friend to buy you a candy bar two or three days after you have put in a set of store molars.

The first election to be held under Kansas City's nonpartisan charter has resolved itself into an old Republican-Democratic fight, with the bosses of the respective parties occupying their accustomed places in the driver's seat.

"Dutch" Anderson was shot by policemen who were pursuing him in the belief that he was Martin Durkin, the Chicago Bandit. So if any survivors of Anderson-Chapman group decide to take revenge, they should bear in mind that it is all Durkin's fault, and that they are free to go as far as they like.

Nebraska is just half way between London and Peking, between the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans, between the Gulf of Mexico and the Northern lakes. The fact is Nebraska is just about the center of the universe. It is nearer by Nebraska to anywhere a man wants to go than any other state on the continent. It is nearer to Heaven from Nebraska than any other point on earth, and it is just as near the other place if anyone cares to go there.

Many people are returning from Florida disgusted.

Among the wild movements on foot are the 1925 dances.

Let's have it between Thanksgiving and Christmas, when meals are meals.

Better stay in Nebraska, where you are sure of a living, if you will work.

A Detroit woman married a man on a bet and now is willing to admit she lost.

Quite properly, it is an ex-stable boy who has become Persia's Man on Horseback.

Sometimes there appears nothing to justify a statue except the fact that the man is dead.

The Al Smith machine looks almost good enough for a match with Dartmouth, Yale or Michigan.

Do you want to see the abatement of crime? Then encourage everyone to go to church regularly.

For years they've been advertising "odd trousers" and at last we are seeing them extremely odd.

A million dollar contractor says the only solid thing in Florida is the concrete he is putting into it.

subsidized? Well, it's so and the man is a robust specimen of manhood due to his living outdoors most of his life.

Our ever-extending public school system is making it harder and harder every year to get a first-class jury.

After allowing people to die with ptomaine poisoning for years, the doctors now now claim there is no such thing.

A short time ago a bushel of wheat would buy five bushels of corn; now it takes only a bushel and a half of wheat to equal the value of a bushel of corn.

American can afford to pay for the education of its boys and girls so long as that education is wisely directed and leads to a higher and more useful type of citizen.

Every automobile salesman claims to feature the biggest feature of his particular car, but the biggest feature in any car is its depreciation, which no salesman seems to care to mention.

Man thinks he is a superior creature because "he has crumpled up the lightning in his hand and rules the world;" but woman is superior to him as she has crumpled him up in her hand.

In short A. Smith rising prestige makes it possible that the next presidential campaign may be waged on new issues. But would the Democratic party be willing to take the chances involved?

It is always a good plan to select more seed corn than will be needed from the crop as replanting may be necessary and there is also the possibility of selling surplus seed to the neighbors.

"Lace is always popular," says a headline on the woman's page. In fact, we noticed a fellow in a not too new Ford the other day, who had gone in for a nice open work pattern for his fenders.

One criminal authority says capital punishment is no good; "we have had capital punishment for many years," he says, "but it hasn't prevented crime." We've had it, true enough; but we haven't used it.

The house ways and means committee has asked the treasury department for the absolute limit to which the government may go in reducing taxes. The house believes taxes ought to be cut. Besides, it has heard there is an election next year.

Ants, called the wisest of insects in Proverbs, have always been objects of interest. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard, consider her ways and be wise." To the true scientist nothing is so small or insignificant that no lesson can be learned from it. And further study of ants may yet yield results of great benefit to humanity.

CRIMES AND CRIMINALS

Crime after crime, in sickening numbers, ugly, inexcusable, beastly, unpardonable crime is reported from various sections of the country.

One remark, in particular, is striking: "It is disquieting to observe how much there is in our midst of sheer stupidity and muddle-headedness."

If the speaker had been traveling from New York to San Francisco or from Duluth to New York and had spent a week in each resting place en route, one would suspect that he re-

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

In the District Court of Cass county, Nebraska.

In the matter of the guardianship of John Wurga, mentally incompetent. Now on this 7th day of November, A. D. 1925, this cause came on for hearing on the petition heretofore filed by James Wurga as guardian of John Wurga mentally incompetent, praying for license to sell the following described real estate, to-wit:

FITTING FINISH

A famous old Chicago saloon, padlocked at last after 40 years of existence, is to be reopened—but as a gospel mission.

Really, no more fitting thing could happen to it. Despite all talk of the cheer and good fellowship and companionship that the saloon furnished it is a fact that every good old-time saloon needed some sort of gospel mission to come along and clean up after it.

Have you anything to buy or sell? Then tell the world about it through the Journal Want Ad column.

HUMAN STUPIDITY

Canon Woods, of Cambridge, England, made a speech to 1,000 clergymen. It is to be hoped that most of these clergymen were intelligent because they listened to a splendid speech and had a chance to profit by it and pass along, each in his own sphere, the results of his cuminations.

To all who are capable of thinking, Canon Woods' remarks present material for many an hour of thought. Here are a few extracts from his speech:

"It is disquieting to observe how much there is in our midst of sheer stupidity and muddle-headedness.

"One can generally spot a man of undisciplined mind by his complete cocksureness, and his cocksureness will be inverse ratio to his years.

"If civilization is the art of living together it must be admitted that the world in general and Europe in particular has not yet made a great success of the art.

"It is characteristic of our swift, bustling world to want everything at once. There is often virtue in impatience, but the desire for short cuts is frequently stupid and disastrous."

He then summarized the England of today as follows:

"Politicians who lack the true sense of responsibility; the so-called idle rich who apparently never heard of the word 'discipline'; workmen who repudiate the agreements made in their name by their leaders; dramatists, novelists, and film producers who have no sense of reticence or restraint; pleasure seekers who never know when or where to half; football crowds who boo the referee; holiday makers who defile the countryside with litter; parents who cannot or will not control their children; young people who own no authority but their own wishes and whims."

England is far away from us. About 3,000 miles from our East and about 6,000 miles from our West. The great bulk of our population are so happy and prosperous that they do not care a hang what England thinks or what England is worrying about.

But it might afford every American much food for thought to realize that these remarks of Canon Woods apply just as well to us as they do to the English.

One remark, in particular, is striking: "It is disquieting to observe how much there is in our midst of sheer stupidity and muddle-headedness."

If the speaker had been traveling from New York to San Francisco or from Duluth to New York and had spent a week in each resting place en route, one would suspect that he referred to the religious bigotry of our various sects, the fanaticism of many of our local and national organizations, the underlying intelligence of our political and partisan movements and, in general, the darn-foolery of our attitude to the vital and everlasting problems of life.

But, as far as we know, he hasn't been here at all. He was only speaking of England. Yet the shoe seems manufactured for our foot.

Is it possible that we have more in common with England than we knew of? Can the English be the same kind of hopeless ginks that we are?

AN ANTIQUE BUTTON

J. V. Bourland of Arkansas, claims to have the oldest collar button in captivity. He has had it for forty-seven years.

This particular collar button was made from a five dollar gold piece presented to Mr. Bourland in 1878.

Five dollars last longer than that it does now.

Converting a gold piece into a collar button shows with what respect the people of Arkansas regard collar buttons.

Probably this particular button has led an uneventful and unexciting life. It has never had any other collar button to play with and has never known the thrill of rolling under a bureau or a bed.

But wait until it has passed down to some younger generation. Then it will begin to enjoy life and see something of the world. There is no fun in being a bird in a gilded cage.

It will learn to hide when its owner looks for it in a hurry. It will learn to roll under the furniture with the best of them, and it will give up a life of leisure and join the working classes.

Life will be worth living for the old collar button Adventure will come to it and it will not be long before it will escape from its present owner and join the other collar buttons on the mysterious journey to wherever it is said that all collar buttons go.
