Britain Not a Big Bully Says Ambassador

Says Greatest Guarantee of Peace is Understanding Between His Own Country and the United States

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 9.—The greatest guarantee of world peace is understanding between the United States and Great Britain, Ambassador Howard T. Blandford said today in a speech before the English-speaking association of America here today.

"If I believed Anglo-American friendship would develop into a big, brutal, bullying power," he asserted, "I never should desire to see it take root. But, because I believe a world peace is not undreaming to build up a world alliance, I therefore believe in a frank understanding between our two great countries."

"The idea of the necessity of a good understanding between the United States and Great Britain is not new," he continued. "We find it in many British and American writers of distinction, including Thomas Jefferson, before, during and after the revolution. They realized the advantage that would ensue to both countries, as well as the friendly feeling between them and from a free and voluntary co-operation, unfettered by any formal alliance."

The ambassador praised the Locarno security pact as bringing a sense of safety between France and Germany, and felt since the empire of Charlemagne was broken up in 843.

Golden Text: "If a man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed."—Peter 4:16.

They Arrest the Missionary

Last Sunday Paul and his party were leaving Militus. From there where our story is laid. On leaving Militus they went by boat to the Island of Cas, which is about forty miles south from Militus, and after leaving this island they went east to the town Palencia in the province of Lycia on the south shore of Asia Minor. On their way they stopped for over night at the city of Rhodes, where was located the statue of the Colossus of Rhodes, which was a gigantic statue that stood over the strait, one foot on one shore and the other on the opposite bank, thus allowing the ships to pass under.

The island of Rhodes is especially noted as a land of roses. Patara is noted for her oracle of Apollo which was nearly as renowned as the oracle of Delphi.

There they changed ships and got one going south and passing Cyprus, where Paul had begun his missionary work some ten years before, he the whole of these ten years having been crowded with much work and startling experiences. They next stopped at Tyre, where lived Hiram Abiff the king who furnished lumber for the building of Solomon's temple.

This was Jazabel, the woman who wicked woman in all history, not barring Cleopatra, the bend of Egypt. This was Zerebel, the woman who had Nabal killed in order to get his vineyard.

Here the party remained for a week and then went on south to Ptolemais. They then went on via land foot. Here they met Phillip, the evangelist (not the one who was chosen one of the deacons of the first church at Caesara) and also met Agabus, who taking Paul's belt, laid it around himself and said: "The Lord shall the owner of this belt be bound at Jerusalem and will be delivered to the Gentiles."

Then the friends endeavored to dissuade Paul from going to Jerusalem. But he only replied, "What do ye weeping and breaking my heart? Do you not know that I am ready to be bound, but even to give my life for the Lord Jesus?"

Here was duty on one hand and love on the other. The dissuasion only served to demonstrate the courage of Paul—a courage that dominated his entire life.

Paul arrived at Jerusalem, he immediately reported to the Elders of the church there, telling them of the wonderful success that had followed his preaching. They being mostly Gentile converts, the Elders requested Paul to go with four persons without money, and take a vow which required a week's fast.

Paul was not willing to do this, and when a week had been fulfilled a number of Jews from Ephesus found him and raised an outcry saying he had brought Greeks into the portion of the temple which was not allowed other than Jews to enter. Their talk created a great stir among the Jews at Jerusalem, and resulted in a riot. Paul was seized and dragged out of the temple, and the doors were closed. The mob endeavored to kill Paul and was beating him and the whole city of Jerusalem was in an uproar. The commotion was so great that the chief captain hearing the tumult ran with the soldiers, and when they had arrived, the mob stopped beating Paul.

After the chief captain and the soldiers had rescued Paul they made inquiry as to what was the cause of the uproar. Some said one and some another thing and not being able to find out anything for certain as to the cause of the commotion, they took Paul into the castle of Antonia. As they were ascending the stairs, Paul said unto the centurion or captain, "May I speak to the people?"

The captain was surprised and answered Paul saying, "Dost thou speak Greek?" thinking he was an Egyptian for there had been an insurrection by one who had led some 400 men to be quelled by the Roman soldiers, Paul took advantage of the situation and said, "I am a Jew born in the city of Tarsus of Cilicia, a no mean city for Tarsus was one of the leading cities of the east. Paul then told of his life, how he was a Jew and a Pharisee and how he had come to Jerusalem and had persecuted the Christians, was present at the stoning of Stephen, later departing for Damascus and how he was converted on the way. There was close attention paid until he declared the gospel of the Master, when the uproar again broke out, and Paul was taken to the tower of Antonia, where the centurion concluded to give Paul a trial by scourging. He was bound to the whipping post and every thing was made ready to apply the lash, when Paul asked the one in charge if it was the custom to scourge a Roman and uncondemned man, for this was against the Roman law. This he had experienced at Philippi.

The captain in charge halted the operation and immediately went to the centurion saying, "Have a care; this man is a Roman." These were the authorities and they had nearly broken a Roman law. When asked how much it had cost him to become a Roman he said, "I was born free, and a Roman."

This was paved the way for the missionary journey to Rome which the coming lessons tell how it was finally effected.

NEW TRADE TRIBUNAL WILL BE RECOMMENDED

Washington, Nov. 8.—Creation of a business tribunal to be known as a joint trade relation committee, which would seek to eliminate abuses and to establish business practice standards to counteract business waste, will be recommended to the National Distribution conference, which meets here December 15-16, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

A committee which has been investigating the subject, headed by A. Lincoln Pile of Boston, has worked out a plan for the joint trade relations committee calling for representation of producers, distributors and consuming interests.

Painleve Cabinet is Destined for a Break-Up

No Solution Yet for Financial Crisis or Restoration of the Franco—May Carry on For a Time.

Paris, Nov. 10.—Premier Painleve will submit his fiscal proposal in the form of a bill for financial restoration to the chamber of deputies Thursday. The groups composing Premier Painleve's majority in the chamber have found it impossible to agree either on the government financial measures or on the socialist plan for a capital levy. It was therefore decided that the situation could be cleared only by a vote of the chamber.

This decision, when it became known in the lobbies, was accepted as the death knell of the cabinet. The premier, however, gave no indication to resign as was the case with M. Caillaux; he accepted the challenge of the socialists and will go before the chamber and fight it out.

"The government has taken the position upon the financial measures, and is glad that the finance committee has done likewise," he said upon leaving the Elysee palace this evening. "The issue is now clearly up to parliament and we hope it will be decided before long."

The failure of M. Painleve to include real estate and landed property, confining the levy to securities alone, arrayed the deputies representing towns and cities against him. Following the vote he decided it was necessary to consult President Doumergue, and accordingly left the chamber for the Elysee palace.

Despite the defeat in the chamber, committee, it was declared this evening that the decision must rest with parliament.

NEW ASPIRANT IN FIELD

Pierre, S. D., Nov. 10.—An additional republican candidate for the United States senate and claims of victory for United States Senator Peter Norbeck and Governor Carl Gunderson in some of the larger communities, marked the opening of South Dakota's year long political campaign today. James G. McParland of Hot Springs was declared a candidate for the senate against Norbeck, H. W. Clark, United States district attorney from Norbeck's home at Redfield, county seat of Spink county, claimed a victory there.

Little can be determined from today's election, as many of the precinct proposal men selected will go to the county meetings unrepresented. At the county meetings, November 15, the field will be narrowed, but the final outcome of the contest for control of the Pierre proposal meeting will not be definitely decided until the convention ballots for a permanent chairman.

Little interest was manifested in the democratic contest, as no candidates have been announced in the party.

AGED TROOPER A SUICIDE

Billings, Mont., Nov. 6.—John Burkman, eighty-six, who as a trooper of the seventh United States cavalry, saddled Gen. George A. Custer's horse, Victor, and was the last outside of those of the command who fell with him to speak to the general on the day of the battle of the Little Big Horn, June 25, 1876, sent a bullet into his brain as he sat on the porch of a rooming house here today and died instantly.

Dependancy over ill health and the almost total loss of sight and hearing were held responsible.

Since his recent return to Billings from Savelle, Cal., where he vainly sought entry in the soldiers' home, Burkman had suffered frequent periods of dependancy.

Governor Not Ready to Favor 3 Cent Gas Tax

Believes Present Road Program, Now Well Started, Should First Receive Undivided Attention

Governor McMullen has not expressed himself either for or against the proposed one-mill levy for "farm to market roads" for an increase of one cent a gallon in the gasoline tax for road purposes, but in talking to executive committee members of the state association that favors these increases he said he favored keeping diligently at the road program which he is now endeavoring to complete.

A delegation comprising Bert George, August Eiche, Fred Putney, W. A. Seldack, John Bushnell and A. H. Richardson called on the governor Monday forenoon. Mr. George, Mr. Putney and P. E. Clement, secretary of the state road roads association, left later that day for Omaha to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the association.

"We talked over the recommendations made at Kearney by the association," said Governor McMullen. "I told them I had not looked into the matters favored by the association sufficiently to express an opinion one way or the other. There may be other ways than those recommended by the association. I told them we ought to go on with our road program, that we are just getting well started and that I thought it was a little early to increase the gas tax or to levy a one-mill tax, but that I believed when the people see the benefits to be derived from the present program they will be ready to express their sentiments. We ought to keep diligently at work upon the matter now in hand."

PRaises OMAHA SPEECH

Detroit, Nov. 10.—President Coolidge's address before the American Legion at Omaha was praised as a courageous and prophetic rebuke for militarism by Dr. Frederick Lynch of New York, in an address today before the congress of peace and security.

"The president's address was prophetic and at the same time full of common sense," Dr. Lynch said. "It is also courageous, for it takes real courage to call militarism foolish, useless and dangerous at a time when there is a decided recrudescence of the military spirit in high places."

Dr. Lynch, educational secretary of the world alliance for international friendship thru the churches, spoke to several hundred delegates, including a majority of churchmen attending the tenth annual meeting of the American council.
