Death of Mrs. J. R. C. Gregory Wednesday

Body Brought to Louisville on Wednesday and Services Were Held at Glendale Church.

From Friday's Daily—
This morning J. R. C. Gregory of Omaha, an old time resident of the vicinity of Eight Mile Grove, was in the city and related the misfortune that has just come to his family in the death of the beloved wife and mother, which occurred on Monday night at Omaha and the funeral services being held at Glendale church near Louisville on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Gregory has been in failing health for the past year and her condition has grown worse in the last few months, being a sufferer from cancer and which caused her death on Monday at the hospital.

The death of Mrs. Gregory has brought a great regret to the host of friends over Cass county where she was well known and loved for her many splendid traits of loving kindness to those with whom she had come in contact. The husband and father and the sons and daughters have the deepest sympathy of the many friends in their sorrow.

Phoebe A. Woods was born in the state of Ohio March 8, 1869 and spent her girlhood days there being married at the age of nineteen years to J. R. C. Gregory, who survives her. To this union there were born ten children, the passing of the mother being the first break in the circle of the family. The children who mourn with the father are Mrs. Glen Rhoden, Manley, Mrs. Jennie May Martin, Omaha, Leslie and Carl Gregory, Imperial, Ola Pearl Terryberry, Cedar Creek, Archie Gregory, Opal Clara Gregory, Denver, Floyd, Elmont and Clovis Gregory of Omaha. The family came to Cass county 36 years ago but have lived in Omaha for 3 years.

The funeral services at Glendale were attended by a number of the old time friends and neighbors and the floral tributes were numerous and very beautiful, attending the feeling of the deep love felt for Mrs. Gregory in her home community. The five sons and Earl Terryberry, a son-in-law were the pall bearers and laid the body to the last long rest.

CARD OF THANKS
We wish to acknowledge our sense of appreciation of the many acts of kindness shown to us at the death of our loved wife and mother, for the many beautiful floral remembrances and to those who took part in the funeral service. May their kindness be rewarded in their own hour of sorrow.—J. R. C. Gregory and Children.

IN MEMORIUM
In memory of our loving mother, composed by her daughter, Mae Martin.

I
Gone to rest, but not forgotten.
How we miss her dear, sweet smiling face;
Though we know she now is sweetly sleeping
In a grander and far better place.

II
Though her sweet voice is stilled here forever,
And empty her old arm chair;
There never was a more loving mother
That would share all our sorrow and care.

III
As she lay there so pale and so helpless,
Not a word she ever complain,
But just tried to keep us all cheerful;
Said she would soon be well again.

IV
And no one will know what a heartache
As I stood by her most day and night,
And knew that my dear mother's spirit
Would soon take its lasting flight.

V
We are waiting, us children and father,
Till this weary life passes o'er—
When we can each go to meet
That's waiting on God's Golden Shore.

The event had been announced as a kid's party and all of the members came attired befitting the occasion, the little lassies and laddies making a very interesting spectacle as they arrived to join in the jolly party. In the prize for the best costume Mrs. E. J. Richey received the honors of the evening.

There were games of the childhood days played and which made the members of the party drift back again to the childhood days and renew the pleasant memories of the past years.

Town and Farm Work Together
Ardmore Business Men Join Farmers in Study of Rural Needs and Problems.

Ardmore, Okla.—A "chamber of agriculture" more than a chamber of commerce characterizes the work of the farm congress which is a part of the commercial organization of this city. It was organized three years ago by John Easley and as a result of its activity a new era of co-operations between the townspeople and the farmers has grown up, to their mutual benefit.

The farm congress holds weekly luncheon meetings and the entire membership of the Chamber of Commerce works on various committees investigating seed selection, soil, analysis, live stock, fruit growing, poultry raising, conservation, irrigation, and marketing. The membership includes bankers, retailers, wholesalers, professional men and educators, some of them landowners but as a rule the membership is interested from a standpoint of service to the farmer.

One of the activities this year is to be the terracing of lands and it is hoped to put at least 50 terracing levels over the county, the county agent having met with groups of farmers and taught them the use of these levels. During the last summer a specialist from the extension department of the state university was employed by the farmers of Carter county and much good was derived from his co-operation.

The soil of Carter county is well adapted to cantaloupes and through the work of the farm congress a large acreage was planted, arrangements having been made for 600 carloads of melons, the purchaser to buy them in the fields.

A pertinent suggestion now pending is that each farmer select for himself a business man as friend and
