Omaha to Have 215,000 Population by July 1

Bureau of Census Bases Figures on Annual Population Increase—Very Pleasing Progress.

Washington, May 24.—Omaha will have a population of 215,000 by July 1, this year, according to estimates prepared by the bureau of census. The estimate of the bureau for Omaha July 1, 1925, was 211,668. The official federal census of Omaha on January 1, 1920, was 191,601.

The estimate is based on the assumption that the annual increase of population since the census of 1920 has been the same as the average annual increase between 1910 and 1920. In those states which took a state census in 1925, the estimate is based on the average annual increase between 1920 and 1925.

Unless there are exceptional conditions of growth, the estimates as prepared by the bureau of census are approximately correct, according to bureau officials.

The estimated population of Lincoln, Neb., for July 1, this year, is 62,000, which is 7,000 more than the official 1920 census gave the city.

Council Bluffs' estimated population for this year is 40,900, or about 1,000 increase over the state census of 1925, and more than 4,000 over the federal census of 1920.

Estimated population of other Iowa towns on July 1, 1926, are: Cedar Rapids, 52,100; Des Moines, 146,000; Dubuque, 41,600; Sioux City, 78,000; Waterloo, 36,900.

Estimated populations of other cities by the bureau follow: New York (including the Bronx, Manhattan, Queens and Richmond), 11,834,000; Chicago, 3,048,000; Kansas City, 375,000; Detroit, 1,290,000; St. Louis, 830,000; Boston, 787,000; Cleveland, 960,000; Philadelphia, 2,608,000; Tampa, 102,000.

GERMANY WANTS JUDGE ON THE WORLD TRIBUNAL

The Hague.—Germany's entry into the League of Nations next September is regarded in World Court circles here as certain. It is but natural, therefore, that Germany will be anxious to have a judge in the Permanent Court of International Justice in this city. The third article of the Court's statutes makes it possible that the number of judges be increased, by one, two, three or four, but no more than four. An increase of two seats seems most likely in the present case, as in that way an uneven number is kept, this being preferable in acquiring a majority more easily in decisions.

One must bear in mind that it is not possible—as sometimes is thought—for a specific German judge to be appointed. The statutes allow only an increase of seats, leaving it to the nations to appoint the judges. This election is done in a rather complicated way through the League Council and the Assembly. As the votes are taken in secret, one never knows the result until announced.

In connection with this, the strange situation arises that it is immaterial whether states which are members of the League have or have not signed or ratified the protocol of membership of the World Court—membership of the League carrying with it the right to vote.
