Firestone Tires Are Carefully Made

Nowhere is more care taken to turn out a finished manufactured product of the highest standard and one that is free from all defects than in the Firestone tire factories at Akron, Ohio, according to Mr. Dowler of the Union Filling Station, Union Neb., Firestone dealer.

"Not only are carefully skilled workmen employed," the dealer said, "and the best quality material used, but the tires are rigidly inspected through every manufacturing process to insure a finished product that meets the most exacting standards."

"Chemists and engineers carefully analyze the materials that go into each Firestone tire. The rubber is tested for the qualities of abrasion, adhesion, elasticity, toughness and tension. The cord fabric is tested for the breaking point, imperfections and weight. Only material that meets the most rigid tests is accepted."

"Through every stage of manufacture, from the construction of the head to the application of the trademark, inspectors with years of experience examine every one of the millions of Firestone tires produced annually."

"In the completely equipped Firestone laboratories, the tires are subjected to severe tests. They are operated on special machines which duplicate as nearly as possible actual service conditions."

"Day and night under all kinds of conditions a fleet of test cars is used in checking the actual results of operating the tires in service. The tires are purposely subjected to especially severe operating conditions by underinflation and over load so that their performance under the worst conditions of service may be accurately gauged."

"This scrupulous care all along the line is why Firestone's have built a worldwide reputation for quality."

BOY WANDERER PICKED UP

From Wednesday's Daily—Last night Officer Clyde Jackson discovered a young boy, some fourteen years of age, wandering along the Main street of the city and after an examination of the boy he was held here at the city jail as a runaway from his home in Kansas City. The boy gave a varied story of his wanderings and at first pointed into the cars of the police a story of how he was kidnapped and forced to accompany two men from Kansas City, Missouri, to this city, but the tale did not sound true to the officers and on further question the boy gave his name as Howard Peskie and stated that he had run away from his home in Kansas City and had bummed rides in cars along the highway until he was able to reach this city.

There were two men, one aged 26 and one 25, who were in company with the boy but they denied any knowledge of his past, their acquaintance being limited to the fact that he had rode part of the way from Kansas City with them in their car.

Chief of Police Johnson ascertained from the boy that he had had been in more or less trouble with his parents and at one time had been in an industrial school in Michigan and that the parents had been unable to control him to any extent.

The boy is still in the city jail pending word from the relatives at Kansas City.

We have a few of the Cass county maps showing every man's farm, and will close them out at 50c each. Call at Journal office and get one now.

IN WRONG SEVERAL WAYS

Sunday there came a ray on the front door of the living quarters of the county jail building, and when the door was answered there was a strange caller at the portal of the county place of imprisonment. The man had evidently made a mistake in coming to the jail but was in the right paw as he was very much affected by some beverage that he had drunk of too freely and which had left its effects very much in evidence on him. The man inquired for some friends, but in his condition, the sheriff decided that it would be best that he remain in the county bastille. Sheriff Stewart assured the inebriated stranger that he was at the right place and ushered him to the rear of the jail to join the "boys" who are guests of the sheriff for various offenses. The stranger at first was much displeased with the surroundings but in a few moments had sunk into a slumber that all of the prison owners and sheriff could not arouse him from and which they decided to let him enjoy until time for the machinery of justice to get busy on his case.
