PROOF BY WISDOM

All this have I proved by wisdom: I said, I will be wise; but it was far from me. That which is far off, and exceeding deep, who can find it out?—Ecclesiastes 7:23-24.

Big brains grow and small ones swell.

No indictment against the woman evangelist.

God Almighty created a smile and little man puts on a long face.

It takes a promoter to unload a bad thing on to a "good thing."

Evil never taunted about the number of men who had proposed to her.

If the bravest are the tenderest the steers that provided our dinner was a coward.

Some people in this town we can better get along without. Who? Why, the knockers, of course.

Apparently all prime ministers look alike to the French franc. It can fall under any of them.

A preacher is no better than any other man, when he commits murder, and should be likewise punished.

When grandma was a young girl she used her hands—these days she uses her feet, either to dance or drive a car.

Correct this sentence: "Let's move into a cheaper neighborhood," said the wife, "regardless of what our friends think."

When a man finds that he can no longer stop a woman's argument with a kiss, he begins to suspect that she's going to be reasonable.

If the band concerts are for the benefit of the whole people, why not have them on the courthouse lawn where they best serve the people?

A French typist produced ninety-four words a minute for an hour. But that probably didn't involve asking the boss how to spell it or getting into an argument with him about the punctuation.

A gentleman never regrets it.

Pretty fair salesday yesterday for a starter.

Man is oftentimes a prisoner locked up in his own ignorance.

There are two causes of cussedness: (1) poverty, and (2) prosperity.

Poor old France is having a hard time of it. She is badly out of kilter.

Building a monument to a great mind is like placing a lantern in the sun.

When a man gets up in the world a good reputation often comes in handy as a parachute.

Education Defends Modern College Youth—Headline. Still, that's better than having a lawyer do it.

Every woman wants love as a steady diet—but a man regards it merely as life's little seasoning.

The leading business men of Plattsmouth are trying hard enough to induce people to buy in this city.

Senator Cole Blease says "so-called education has ruined many a good farm hand." So has an election to the senate.

Now comes the season when lovely woman kicks up an awful row if she can't have a few clothes—and the fewer the better.

How the Coolidge advocates must chuckle over those advertisements which set forth that "success depends entirely upon personality."

It is so much easier for a girl to find a man who would be willing to "leave home" for her, than it is to find one who will stay home for her.

People who have believed in a millennium will be gratified to learn that the railroads are announcing summer rates to the East for the first time in years.

The Italian ship on which Ponzi was arrested was called the Sic Vos Vobis, but those who try to find in their Italian dictionaries aren't going to do very well.

In some parts of France the country people, upon the approach of a thunder storm, adorn their hats with sprays of hawthorn leaves to protect them from lightning.

The men who went around the world in 28 days found griplane service worse in the United States than in any other country they traversed. The first shall be last.

J. L. Garvin, the British editor, says that fifty years hence the United States will have 500,000,000 people. Maybe we had better add more teeth to our immigration laws.

Is it not a poor policy to bankrupt the country to keep highly paid grafters in office under the pretense of enforcing the law. The people are not in for it, but the grafters are.

A Milwaukee man with a broken neck went into a drug store and asked for medicine. But Milwaukee druggists have no medicine that is good for broken necks—not now, anyway.

Opie Read says the objection to most orators is that they continue to talk after the truth gives out. The objection to many of them is that they haven't any truth on hand when they begin to talk.

If the old fellow who rang the Liberty Bell could have foreseen that the amusement street at the Sesqui-centennial would be called the "Gladway," he would probably have refused to ring a tap.

Senator Borah plans to speak in every state in the union, in opposition to American entry into the world court. Then if he has any time left over, he'll probably go and speak to the world court about it, too.

Yes, it is all right for Will Hays to stop the movies from twitting the dry law, but it's lucky he's not the czar of vaudeville, or all our comedians would have to start selling insurance or go back to barbering.

When a man asks a girl to change her name, somehow he mentions all the other things he expects her to change with it—hair cut, her meal hours, her doctor, her lawyer, her politics and her taste in colors and jokes.

Some candidates are doing most of their electioneering here in Plattsmouth. That isn't going to get them anything. Get out and see the farmers and their woes. They are the ones that are going to do the talking and voting this year.

The young fellow who has a coffee and doughnut breakfast down in town, and armchair lunch and eats a delicatessen dinner out of paper bags when he gets home in the evening, nine times out of ten has married some fool girl because she was a good dancer.

IF COMPETITORS ANNOY

A few words to the business man—more particularly the storekeeper—confronted with the fact of unexpected competition:

Accept this as a challenge. Don't shrivel under it. But neither waste energy—and lose neighborhood goodwill—by inveighing against and denouncing the competitor as an interloper who is not to be trusted.

Just as truly as all the world loves a lover, so does all the world hate and suspect a knocker.

The more adjectives you use in describing the newcomer who has invaded your territory, the more surely you will drive trade away.

Take him for granted. To all inquisitive questioners make the smiling response. "I guess there is room for both of us." Then hustle to hold the ground won in the past.

Take stock of your goods, Take stock of yourself.

You may have lapsed—storekeepers, like everybody else, are liable to lapse—into easy going ways. You may have let your stock become low grade, and your service low grade likewise.

Refuse any longer to traffic in bargains that are not really bargains. If you have lined yourself with the substitutes, get out of their ranks forthwith.

Do some window dressing. And do some soul dressing. Awake if need be, to the importance of making good on everything you say.

When you haven't what is asked for, admit it frankly. Don't hope to get by with something that will give the purchaser scant satisfaction—unless he or she knows that you are selling the best you have.

And make it a point to stock up with the articles that really are wanted. The margin of profit may be less, but that will be more than compensated by growth of business.

ORIGIN OF BOBBED HAIR

Origin of bobbed hair is now definitely laid to the Revolutionary war. Discovery by Captain L. C. Baird, an army officer, of dusty old Continental army records stored for years in the Schuylkill arsenal at Philadelphia shows America's first shingle was worn by the American doughtboy and not by the American flapper.

Bobbing the hair was even made a matter of general orders for the soldier of 1776, the ancient documents indicate. One such decree, issued at West Point, is oddly at variance with the present-day West Point traditions which frown on anything but the trimmest of hair-cuts.

"As the head dress of a soldier is one of the first and necessary ornaments," it reads, "the captain commands the N. C. officers and privates of the first regiment to have their hair cut behind not to exceed seven inches long and close to the head.

"The N. C. officers and privates of the second regiment to have their hair tied behind in a bob cut close to the head, the hair of the whole to be cut on the top of the head short and brushed back. The officers commanding companies will see that this order is carried into effect as soon as possible."

This may be a shocking bit of news to the erstwhile Mrs. Vernon Castle, who has been generally credited with originating the boyish bob, but facts are facts, and this is a bit of history that cannot be contradicted.

PROGRESSIVE CANDIDATES

Like Atlee Pomerene in Ohio, former Senator John F. Nugent is to try a comeback in Idaho. Both these Democrats went down in the Harding landslide of 1920. If Nugent is returned to the senate there will be less point to the trick question one hears in Washington: "Who is the other senator from Idaho?"

Nugent of late months has been performing a valuable service on the Federal Trade Commission in helping his fellow minority member, Huston Thompson, to turn the light on the methods of the reactionary majority.

If this record is a criterion Nugent's election over Frank R. Gooding, who is Borah's present colleague, would measurably strengthen the progressive group in the senate.

AUTO ACCIDENT

Friday afternoon, a car, driven by Mr. Hyatt, who was accompanied by his wife and little daughter, upset about a mile north of town, and Mr. Hyatt was badly cut about the face by flying glass, and narrowly escaped serious injury to his eyes. Mrs. Hyatt had her collar bone broken and was more or less bruised, while the little girl escaped injury.

Mr. Hyatt, who is a railroad man, living at Norfolk, and the family, were on their way to Kansas to spend their two weeks' vacation.

After receiving first aid here, the car was towed to the Philpot garage, emergency repairs made and they returned to Omaha to have repairs made to their car, and declared their intention of proceeding on to Kansas, determined not to let their vacation be interfered with.—Weeping Water Republican.
