Present Theories Near to an Upset

Kings County Attorney Starts an Investigation in Brooklyn in Hall-Mills Murder Case.

New York, Aug. 4.—District Attorney Charles J. Dodd of Kings county has started in Brooklyn an investigation in the Hall-Mills murder case. Mr. Dodd is now in New York, N. J., that will upset present theories if evidence develops along lines suggested.

The body of the Rev. Dr. Edward W. Hall was examined at Kings county hospital in Brooklyn after the murder, four years ago by Dr. Berneid Vaughan, who is now dead. Dodd has found in Dr. Vaughan's note a suggestion that rifle as well as pistol bullets were used in the slaying of Dr. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills, the choir singer. The New York Times says today it has learned that official records made at autopsies do not state the size of bullets used.

Shells of .32 calibre bullets were found near the bodies, but it is pointed out that there may have been placed there to divert suspicion.

New Brunswick, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Love letters written by Mrs. Eleanor Mills to the Rev. Edward W. Hall, and scattered in fragments over their bodies four years ago have assumed new and unexpected importance in the reopened investigation of the murder. In the opinion of Senator Simpson, special prosecutor for the state, "My detectives have direct evidence that these letters were in the hands of a certain person," he said yesterday. "We also know this person obtained them after they had been found beneath a pillow. Naturally I can't give the names of the person who held the letters just before the murder, but I don't distinguish between the people who brought the letters and those who committed the murder."

Senator Simpson declared he had new evidence showing Mrs. Hall had knowledge of the letters before the slaying, although in one interview she declared she had not suspected her husband's friendship with the choir singer.

CANDIDATES VISIT THE CITY

From Saturday's Daily—
Yesterday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gardner of the Eagle Beacon drove over from their home to look after the interests of the candidacy of Mr. Gardner for the republican nomination for state representative and they remained here over night visiting with the friends and meeting many new ones in the interest of the genial editor.

While well known in the western section of the county, Mr. Gardner is not so well known here save to those who have attended the free bridge meetings during the past winter, as Mr. Gardner fathered the idea and personally called the first meeting to lay plans for a program of bridge construction over the Missouri, and is president of the Cass County Free Bridge and Highway association.

Bert Reed, of Weeping Water, who is one of the candidates for the republican nomination for sheriff was also here yesterday, meeting the friends and acquaintances in the interest of his candidacy for the office of county law enforcer.

County Clerk George R. Sayles departed this morning for a trip over the county, taking with him ballots that will be used in the forthcoming primary election on next Tuesday.
