BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON

Sunday, September 6th.

By M. S. Briggs

Golden Text: "And Jehovah spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh to his friend."—Ex. 33:11.

The Glory of God

P. H. Welshimer, who teaches a large Bible school class in Canton, Ohio, as well as preaches at the Christian church there, and writes the Sunday school lesson for the Lookout, in his presentation of the lesson so nearly agrees with what we think is one of the best, we are stealing the entire lesson and here it is—we know you will like it.

"Evil days have come upon Israel. The people had persuaded Aaron to lead them in the making of a golden calf, which was to represent God—a direct violation of the command so recently given, forbidding the making of graven images. God called Israel a stiff-necked people, and His wrath waxed hot against them. Moses, hearing the shouts of the people, and knowing their folly, broke the tablets of stone on which the law was written. He also broke up the calf and burned it with fire, and grinding it to powder and strewn it upon the water, he made the children of Israel drink of it. The sons of Levi caused to fall in one day about three thousand men. The people were then asked to consecrate themselves to Jehovah. Moses then offered an intercessory prayer in their behalf. Then came the command to lead the people toward the land of promise. They stripped themselves of all ornaments as they marched away from Mount Horeb. Here was a humble and humiliated people. They were stiff-necked, to be sure, but they had been outdone, and their sins were upon their heads.

"Somewhat removed from the camp was a tent known as the tent of meeting. Any one seeking Jehovah went out to that tent. And when Moses arose and every man stood at his tent door and looked after Moses until he disappeared in the tent. Then, the pillar of cloud came down and surrounded the tent door, while Jehovah spake to Moses. He then spoke as friend to friend. Moses did not see His face, nor did the people see it. The cloud served as a protection. There, in the tent, was the great leader and mediator of the people, talking with Jehovah for their welfare. They stood at their own doors with reverence, knowing that the hour was sacred when Moses was talking to God for them. It is quite probable from that custom we have our custom today, of all the people standing with bowed heads and with reverence while another leads in the prayer of petition and thanksgiving to almighty God.

"In that wilderness march, with all of its ups and downs, the children of Israel have taught some fine lessons to the people of this day. Joshua, a young man, the son of Nun, who later became Moses' successor, was with him in the tent, and when Moses returned to the people Joshua remained.

"God said to Moses: 'My presence shall go with thee, and I will bless thee.' A wonderful lesson of care and protection is shown in this story. An untrained, dependent people were suddenly thrust out into the great open places. Laws had to be given, rules of conduct established, leaders selected and trained, and, in a word, they must fit themselves into a new society. Here great lessons of citizenship are being taught. Israel was in reality going to school. A great land awaited their coming, but they were not ready to inherit it. The tasks beyond the river were too large for them. Faith had to be established, a virile character developed, and trust in Jehovah made strong. All of this was a long-drawn-out process, but it was necessary to the development of the people. One is impressed with the patience which God manifested toward His erring creatures, and the constant need of a message from Jehovah to His children is proved. On every occasion, Moses protested to be the right man. His was a wonderful faith. He never lost sympathy with his people, nor was he out of touch with them. He even prayed that he might be eliminated if the blessings of Jehovah were to be withheld from those within the camp.

"Even in that early period worship is stressed. When the cloud surrounded the door and the people knew that God was talking with God, their own hearts were stirred and their worship was most helpful. A man who worships not today walks on thin ice. Worship is essential to keep in tune with God, to meet the temptations of life and to come out triumphant in every conquest.

"A significant statement is this: 'I have found favor in my sight, and I know thee by name.' This was spoken of Moses. Favor had been found in the sight of God because Moses believed God, trusted Him, obeyed Him, was interested in the people of God and played the entire game honorably. Men today will be in favor of God who pursue the same course and their name will be known to Jehovah.

"Where is the glory of God? Moses said: 'Show me thy glory.' Moses had seen God's power in the deliverance from Egypt and the rolling up of the waters, making a dry passage as Israel crossed the sea. He had seen God's power in the giving of the manna, but the glory of God is quite another thing. And, in answer, God caused His goodness to pass before Moses. In this the outstanding word was 'mercy,' for he said: 'I will show mercy on whom I will show mercy. Mercy is a great word. Without the mercy of God, man would have no

DECINES PROFFERED HONOR

From Wednesday's Daily—Attorney Joseph A. Capwell of this city who had his name written in on the democratic primary ballot by a large number of admirers for the position of county attorney, yesterday afternoon filed with County Clerk George R. Sayles, his declination of the nomination that had been preferred him.

Mr. Capwell has served his party faithfully and well and is one of the most brilliant young members of the bar of Cass county and has since coming to this city built up a very nice practice that is constantly growing and which he feels that he would not be justified in neglecting to become a candidate for office as he owes something to himself as well as the party of which he is a member and therefore will not make the race this year for the office of county attorney or any other office.

Mr. Capwell served in the office of county attorney for several months in 1924 and made a very capable and efficient official.

HAS UNUSUAL ACCIDENT

From Wednesday's Daily—Last evening while Virgel Perry was driving west on Locust street near the viaduct on the Missouri Pacific tracks over the street, he had a rather unusual accident befall his sedan and which was largely the fault of some boys who were playing along the tracks on the viaduct.

The boys had been throwing objects off the top of the viaduct to the roadway below and as the car of Mr. Perry came along someone hurled a large spike, one of the type used in track work, down on the road. The spike struck the car of Mr. Perry and penetrated through the top of the car, making a good sized hole. Fortunately the missile did not strike any of the occupants of the car as it could easily have caused serious if not fatal injuries.

The police are investigating the matter and will see that an effective stop is put to any further acts of this kind and if the boys are found to be continuing this practice they may find themselves in jail and wondering how it happened. This practice is a very dangerous one and if the spike had happened to strike a person instead of the car it would have resulted in fatal injuries.

LIKES PLATTSMOUTH STORES

From Wednesday's Daily—Yesterday there was a stranger in the city from Cheyenne county, residing at Sidney, who gave a real living proof that the Plattsmouth stores are the real thing in the way of bargain offering institutions. This gentleman was here on an auto trip and happened to pick up a copy of the Journal and seeing some of the rockbottom prices that were quoted for the best line of high class staple goods decided that he would invest. He came to one of the local clothing stores and made the purchase of a suit of clothes, expressing himself frankly that he was surprised at such splendid prices and the high quality of goods that was to be found at the local stores. The man felt that he had saved himself a great many dollars in buying his clothes here and at a price far below that he would have to pay in his own home or even in the larger cities.

WILL GO TO HOSPITAL

From Wednesday's Daily—Virgil Perry, well known young farmer of this section of the county, will go to the hospital at Omaha in the next few days where he will undergo an operation for appendicitis from which he has been suffering for some time past. Mr. Perry has not been feeling the best for some time and to add to his condition the sudden death of his father has come as a severe blow to him. The friends are trusting that this splendid young man may soon be able to recover from the ordeal his clothes here and at a price far below that he would have to pay in his own home or even in the larger cities.

HAS TONSILS REMOVED

From Wednesday's Daily—Yesterday Clifton Gooding, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Gooding of this city, was operated on at the Immanuel hospital in Omaha for the removal of his tonsils and adenoids from which he has been suffering for some time past. The little boy is reported to be doing nicely and Mr. Gooding was in Omaha today expecting to bring the little son home this evening if the circumstances would permit.
