The defendant through his attorneys had made a motion for the continuance of the cases owing to a filing in the district court of a suit against all of the parties in the suit as well as Edward Fitzgerald, by the First National bank for the sum of $1,153.21. ## Chief Caupolican Delights a Large Sized Audience

Recital at the Parmele Theatre Last Evening Heard and Enjoyed by Many.

From Tuesday's Daily—Last evening the general public of the community was given the opportunity of seeing and hearing Chief Caupolican, noted Indian baritone singer and entertainer whose work on the grand opera and vaudeville stage has received world wide recognition.

It was very pleasing that as large an audience of the music lovers of the city were present to partake of the musical treat that the singer and his charming and gifted accompanist, Mlle. Jeanne Renard offered during the course of the evening program.

The chief does not offer any of the modern day adaptations of the jazz type and his selections are usually of the popular standard numbers interspersed with a few of the more classic numbers as they are called.

The beauty of many of the numbers were enhanced in that they were given in the tongue in which they were written, the Italian and French selections offered last evening being given with all of their beauty preserved and enhanced by the wide range of the rich and powerful voice of the singer.

Here as in many of the cities where he has appeared Chief Caupolican's most enthusiastically received numbers were in the group of the Indian melodies that have become a part of the music of the American people and which carries with it the charm and haunting melodies that the composers have woven around the Indian songs. The group of Indian selections were very heartily received last evening by the large audience and were splendidly given.

The rendition of several of the operatic selections offered the singer a wide range of voice and which gave the audience the opportunity of fully appreciating the full charm and beauty of the rich baritone notes of Chief Caupolican.

During the recital Mlle. Jeanne Renard, whose exceptionally artistic work as accompanist added to the interest of the recital, gave several piano numbers that were very artistically presented and well chosen.

The chief was also heard in a group of the best known and always enjoyed songs of the past fifteen years whose sweetness and charm has the power to sway their audience and in the presentation of this group of melodies the chief was assisted in the recital by E. H. Wescott of this city who served as the accompanist in his always pleasing manner.

It was with real regret that the members of the audience saw the close of the recital come and break the perfect enjoyment that had held the closest attention of all of the members of the audience. As a fitting closing number the chief offered "The Long, Long Trail."

Chief Caupolican and his accompanist Mlle. Renard, departed today for Philadelphia where they are joining one of the large grand opera companies for the winter season and the few days stay here of the noted singer and his charming companion have been most pleasant ones for the friends that they have met here in this city.

G. W. Holdrege, Pioneer Railroad Builder, is Dead

Heart Attack Carries Away Leader Who Started Work Here and Was Friend of City.

George W. Holdrege, 79, former general manager of the Burlington lines west, and Nebraska builder, died at 1 o'clock this morning at his home, Fifty-first street and Underwood avenue, Omaha.

Heart trouble was the immediate cause of death. He had been ill since Sunday. A slight cold was the first intimation that he was not in his usual health.

Mr. Holdrege was at his office Saturday.

Mr. Holdrege had given the Burlington fifty-one years' continuous service. He began as a clerk in the paymaster's office and rose steadily, until he became a powerful figure in railroad circles.

He was born in New York City March 26, 1847.

Mr. Holdrege was ever a friend of Plattsmouth and this city and its people feel the passing of this giant of the railroad age as a real personal loss as his life had been more or less intimately woven around this city.

Tribute From Holden

When President Hale Holden of the Burlington railroad visited Omaha in January, 1925, and was the guest of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce at luncheon, he caused Mr. Holdrege, another guest to stand up, and while the audience rose and cheered the happily smiling man, Mr. Holden said:

"This is the man who built the railroad west of the Missouri river. He has been an honor to his state and to the company to which he has given the best years of his life."

To George Ward Holdrege's faith in the middle west, his confidence that its soil could be made to produce crops and fatten livestock for food for millions, and his unswerving conviction that it could be made the prosperous homestead of hundreds of thousands of people, are attributed the extension of the Burlington lines throughout Nebraska and into South Dakota, Wyoming, Montana and Colorado.

An Empire Builder.

This railroad building proceeded and made possible the settlement of the vast farm acreage of the west, led to the founding of sources of villages that grew to important towns and cities, and aided the development of the oil and mineral resources of the Rocky mountain region.

Because of his vision in the first place, and his insistence, as general manager of the Burlington lines west of the Missouri that the rails be laid in the second place, was Mr. Holdrege hailed as one of the most important of the "empire builders" of middle America.

Schooled at Irvington-one-the-Hudson, near New York City; then a student of Harvard and a member of the crew of 1867 and 1868, Mr. Holdrege was graduated, with the degree of bachelor of arts in 1869. By birth and easterner, he was by instinct a pioneer, and the end of the summer found him at Pacific Junction, Ia., beyond the end of the railroad, boarding a ferry to cross the Missouri river at Plattsmouth. He reached that town September 17, 1869, and became a clerk there for the Burlington.

Brakeman and Conductor.

He saw his tracks pushed to the Missouri river, and then into Nebraska, with the building of the bridge. After a few years service in Iowa, first as brakeman, then as passenger conductor.

Within a decade he had become trainmaster and then assistant superintendent. In 1882 he was made assistant general manager, with offices

CULVERT OUT ON ROAD

From Wednesday's Daily—This morning a culvert on the Cedar Creek road running west from the Oak Hill cemetery, was reported out of service and making necessary the re-routing of travel from this city west on the Louisville road to the north road and thence north to the Platte bottom road for connection with the Omaha road. The culvert will be repaired as quickly as possible but will make some little delay in the use of the road. The wash-out of the culvert was occasioned by the very heavy rain last night.

Jess F. Warga is the 1926 Golf Champion

Large Crowd Comes Out to Witness the Local Championship Golf Finals.

From Monday's Daily—Jess Warga by his steady playing and with deadly accuracy in handling his iron shots seemed to have little difficulty in disposing of Dr. Westover the 1924 champion and holder of the southeastern Nebraska championship.

The score of 8 up and 6 to play in the 36 hole match yesterday afternoon tells little of the thrills which the gallery received while following the two players. Cloudy and threatening weather during the first 15 holes did not dampen the crowd's enthusiasm even when a light shower of rain started to fall, and both players were followed with intense interest by their friends throughout the match.

The score sheet shows that Warga made four birdies in the 30 holes played, while Dr. Westover made one. For the three complete rounds played, Warga scored a 32, 33 and a 34, while Dr. Westover scored a 36, 35 and a 40. Up until the third round the doctor was pushing Warga pretty hard and at the end of the first 18 he was only 3 down, but the brief rest
