BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON

Sunday, October 31.
By M. S. Briggs

Golden Text: Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people.

The Essence of True Patriotism
What is a patriot, but he who loves his country, and, as Farragut says, "My country, in her dealings with mankind and the nations of the world, may she ever be right, but my country right or wrong," and obeys her laws.

Patriotism is one of the things which are real, not jingoism, that is only a mere show, and bragadocio, but true patriotism, is that state of character which makes one a true lover of his country, of the liberties which she extends, and the protection which she guarantees, with respect for the laws, and an obedience of them, for they are the essence of the experience of the people, which have been adopted for the regulation of the country, and the obtaining of the best in society and government, and the making of the home the most sacred place in the world, and protecting it from the inroads of criminals and bale influence of those oracles which tend to destroy it, influence, and also guarantee the church of ones choice and the privilege of worshipping God according to the dictates of ones own conscience and in accordance with the commands which have emanated from the common Father of us all.

This country was settled by people who fled from oppression and who came to America because it afforded religious liberty, and the right to form a government for the people by the people and of the people where all would be glad to assist in making as well as obeying the laws.

The sacredness of life was one of the first laws which was passed, and with it the right to have and acquire property for another of the laws the one prohibiting stealing, that there were laws to protect the weak against the strong when he was an oppressor, the restrictive laws prohibited not alone the killing of one another but it also would not allow one to burn another's home, or to maim or destroy his stock, neither was one allowed in any way to pollute the home of another, his wife or his children, and to do this would be to destroy the very purity of the home, and the unit of government.

Broadminded Men Are Needed.
Men, true broadminded men, who look to the good of all and are not selfish, as Lincoln, who thought of all the people rather than himself, and for the championing of the black man, who was then a slave, he lost his life, by men who did not respect the rights of others. Men like this are to be venerated and made the object of what ones idea is of just what a true American in its broadest sense can and should be. C. H. Head has put it in poetry, the very ideal of what a man should be, and which is also the breathing of a prayer for just such men:

God give us men! Determined brave and strong—
Who stand for right and dare to smite the wrong;
Whole hearted men—unselfish, fearless, bold—
Whose love for truth outweighs their greed for gold;
Devoted men who think and pray and plan
How best to serve and held their fellow man.
While selfishness misrules, and greed and lust
Entice and drag victims to the dust,
Send up the prayer, again and yet again,
With faith unflinching still—God give us men!

This day needs brave men just as well as they were needed when the nation was being besieged by enemies of this land, with the sword and bayonet for goal, the liberties of this country, the very homes are in danger, when the hateful influences of the foreign element seeks to break down our laws and teach other to do so.

This or any other country is no better, nor worse than the people make or allow it to be. Patrick Henry said "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." So it is with the sacredness of the home, and the protection of her good name from the inroads of he who would sell his country and her good name for a paltry dollar.

The currency of our land was created as a vehicle to convey property from one to another and not to become our master, and not to enslave the creators of this very fine medium of exchange of the products of one for the products of another. The greedy desire for gold, that is the love of money, is the root of all evil, for this is considered the power, and is called the Almighty Dollar. For the acquirement of this source of power, murders are committed, and all the laws in the catalogue are broken. When a law observance or reverence for the laws and the rights of others are not respected, society seeks a lower strata and crime becomes rampant. It is only by the observance of the laws and the rights of others that the stability of the government is made secure. All people should observe and obey the laws which govern them and if they are real patriotic American citizens, they will respect and endeavor to have others respect the law, whether that particular law suits them or not. While we have laws let all respect them, and if they are not right, repeal them. If the law against murder is not right repeal it and allow everybody to murder whom they please, so in regard to the sanity of the home and all the laws, but while they are laws respect and obey them. If you see a man stealing your neighbors corn, his cow, or his hogs or chickens you are ready enough to report and do all you can to apprehend the thief. But are you as careful to protect the honor of his wife or daughter, for you say that's none of

Child Suffers Severe Injury in Fall from Horse

Mildred, Six Year Old Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Rhoden of Near Murray Hurt.

Mildred, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Rhoden of near Murray, was very severely injured on Friday afternoon while en route home from school.

The little one had been in the habit of riding on horseback from her home to the school house some distance away and on Friday at the close of the school she started home and while enroute was thrown from the horse to the ground and suffered a very severe injury that has caused a great deal of apprehension to the family and attending physicians.

The little girl struck the ground with considerable force and her chief injuries seem to be in a concussion of the brain. When found she was unconscious and has since been in that condition, it being thought that she is suffering from hemorrhages of the brain that were brought on by the fall.

Medical aid was summoned as soon as possible after the accident and the injured girl cared for but her condition is still very grave and requires the constant care and attention of the family and physicians.

The Rhoden family reside three miles northwest of Murray and where the child is being cared for.
