During the rush which precedes Christmas time we missed the arrival of the young lady who is making her home at Soren Peterson's, and has brought happiness to this home and will look after the welfare and happiness of this excellent couple in the years to come. Everyone concerned is getting along nicely even Father Soren Peterson.

John Skinner came to the rescue in getting the taxmen, R. M. Coatman and Harry Appleman home when they succeeded in getting off the jury week before last. They had succeeded in getting a ride to Weeping Water with Mark Wiles, another jurymen, and John came and brought them home, otherwise they would have had to spend Sunday in Weeping Water, still that would not have been so bad either.

Henry Miller who had a sick cow one night last week went out with a lantern to look after the cow who was in the field and sitting the lantern down the wind blew it out and he lost it. He had to enlist the services of his friends Simon Rehmeyer and Doctor Williams, they getting the car to the barn but inadvertently the door was left open and the cow got out and went and hunted the lantern up for her master. She sure is a good cow.

Last week Phil Kline purchased of E. Sturzenegger the old store building near the Chas. Brown residence and known as the E. E. Day building. Mr. Kline will tear the building down and use the lumber to build a nice modern home here in South Bend. This building is one of the land marks in South Bend and was built in the early seventies by Mr. Byron Dill's father for a store building and rented as high as seventy dollars a month which was quite a sum of money in those pioneer days. Mr. Day now lives in Weeping Water and conducts a general mercantile business. He is well past the three score and ten mark but on a visit here last winter he recalled many stirring events that occurred here while he was receiving his early business education. After the coming of the Rock Island and Missouri Pacific a number of the businesses here were moved to the new towns and among them was Mr. Day's. The building was then used for a saloon, pool hall, barber shop, store house, etc. The second story was remodeled into a hall which served the community many years as lodge room and town hall and many stirring dances were held there as this was before the Volstead Act and more inspiration could be put into them.
