SMALL FIRE LAST EVENING
From Wednesday's Daily—
The residence property occupied by James Bajec on North 9th street had a very close call from destruction by fire last night and which was only prevented by the prompt action of Mr. Bajec who was home at the time. The fire seems to have started from an over heated stove, the wood box catching fire, this being just a short distance from the stove and the flames made their way along the wall and also burned a part of the flooring quite badly before the flames could be extinguished. The owner of the building feels fortunate, however, that the fire was no worse.

Enthusiastic Buyers at Cash-Raising Sale
H. M. Soennichsen Store Does Record-Breaking Business on Opening Day of Bargain Event.

If anyone doubts the value of advertising there is conclusive proof of the power of the printed word in the opening day of the H. M. Soennichsen store's January Cash-Raising sale on Wednesday this week.

Customers flocked to the store from early morning until late at night to share in the feast of bargains, and as a result a new record in one day's gross business was established.

Despite the heavy run on all popular lines of merchandise, the store was able to supply customers with all requests for goods, except the shopping baskets at 9c and the Griswold cast iron skillets at 19c. Five dozen cases of canned milk and equally large quantities of Campbell products were sold.

"We are more than satisfied with the response of the public to our efforts to raise money," said Mr. Soennichsen at the close of the day's business. "Price advertised are not for one day but will continue throughout the month of January, and we will replace depleted stocks of the more popular lines and continue selling them at the advertised price in order that no one may be disappointed when they come to buy. Large warehouse stocks are being transferred to our shelves tonight to provide for business tomorrow and the rest of the week, and rush orders are being placed for goods in which we anticipate a shortage."

Will Appeal from Commission Order

Burlington to Fight the Ruling Relating to Construction of a New Station Building at Wilber.

The Burlington railroad will appeal from the decision of the railway commission that the railroad must build a new depot at Wilber and that it will test the right of the commission to issue such an order.

The case was argued to the commission by Frank Bartos, well known Wilber attorney, and in this demand he was supported by the business interests of the city.

The claim of the railroad is that the facilities for handling business at Wilber are adequate considering the volume of business which is carried to and from that station.

It is understood that during the year to come two new depots at important stations in eastern Colorado are to be built and that the depots at Exeter and Ord are to be rebuilt. The company makes it a rule to build two or three new depots a year and remodel and repair as many more as necessary. Other depot work may have been planned which is not announced.

A new depot cost being a charge to capital account, it is held by the railroad that only the interstate commerce commission has jurisdiction of such matters, and alone can order new stations built. The commission contends that congress, when it passed the transportation act did not intend to retain in the federal commission his power once exercised by states.
