Enjoy Fish Breakfast.

Mont Shrader was over to the river recently and purchased a large number of fish which he brought home and domiciled in the watering trough, and from where he used them for his table supply. Last Monday evening having left a limited supply, and being a visitor in Murray until a late hour was accompanied by Bud Nickles, Anderson Lloyd and Lester Dill went to the home where it devolved upon Anderson and Lester to secure the fish which were lifted from the icy waters of the water tank, and prepared for cooking, which it was the part of Mont and Bud to cook them.

The early breakfast was served at just four-thirty, and surely most thoroughly enjoyed by the four young men, as they were adept at the art of serving fish just to suit.

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON

Sunday, March 27th

By M. S. Briggs

Golden Text: "If ye love me, you will keep my commandments."—John 14:15.

Living the Christian Life

"I am the life, the truth and the way," were the words of Christ, and at the beginning of the Christian era, the Christian faith was known as "the way," and was thus known for many years, and when Christ said, "I am the way," He meant that there was no other way given under heaven or among men whereby we must be saved. Then when we would know the way, we must know the Christ, who is the way. Christ said, "I am the life, the truth and the way." He meant that we must be like Him. To be followers of the Master means we must do as he does, and do the things which he commands.

The beginning of this quarter was ushered in by the calling of the first four disciples, when the Master called Andrew and Simon and James and John, they all being fishers, saying, as He did so, "Follow me and I will make you to become fishers of Men." Amos R. Wells has to say:

What though waves are fierce and light—
And the storm is in the sky?
And our boat is far from land—
And the harsh ropes tear the hand?
Fishermen, disciples we,
As of old in Galilee,
Worn and weary, cold and wet,
Cheerily we fling the net—
Sweeping through the waves of woe,
Men, our brothers are below.

Long and wide the line is flung,
For the brotherhood of man, and it is for us to do the work which the Master first began.

Christ said unto the disciples, and through them unto us all, Love your enemies, do good unto them that hate you. Judge not and ye shall not be judged; condemn not and ye shall not be condemned; release and ye shall be released. Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over shall ye give unto your bosom. Judge not and ye shall not be judged. This is the gist of the real dealings with our fellow man. The Bible is the true guide to human life for it contains instructions in the right way of living by the Master, as well as all the holy writings.

Holy Bible, book divine,
Precious treasure, thou art mine!
Mine thou art to guide my youth—
In the paths of love and truth.

There is no doubt inspired to put the truth into poetry, Search the Scriptures, for in them you will find the way to eternal life, and they testify of the Christ.

"Ask and it shall be given unto you; seek and you shall find; knock and it shall be opened." During all His life with the disciples, Christ taught the efficacy of prayer—earnest, sincere, effective prayer. In the bitter garden of Gethsemane he said, "If it be possible, let this cup pass from me; but not my will, but thine be done." When the disciples asked him to teach them how to pray, He gave them the prayer which says, "Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come, they will be done in heaven as on earth. Give us this day our daily bread; forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from all evil. For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever and ever. Amen!"

How just is that which says "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us." For unless we have forgiven others, how then can we expect forgiveness. In law there is an old axiom particularly applicable to equity cases, being as follows: "He who seeks equity must grant equity," or in other words you cannot come into court demanding "justice" unless you have first washed your hands of all unjustness.

When we have learned this lesson we are making some progress along the way. The Master has given us a fine example of how we should be prepared to overcome temptation as it presents itself to us, and that is by being prepared with the very particular piece of scripture. The devil is very apt in the quoting of scriptures and we must know the scriptures ourselves.

We must be Christians in reality and must practice it in its true sense of the world. In the parable of the talents, Christ teaches us that for the abilities which are given us we are to produce results, and that in proportion to the abilities which we have been given. In the parable of the talents, five were given one, two to another and one to the last one. The ones who were given the larger abilities were willing to work and did so, not because they had better abilities, but because they used them. The fact that the man had but one talent was not the cause of his failure, but because he would not work. He was not given the larger abilities and from the paralysis of fear he did not do anything. The Lord expects us to do things which we are qualified to do, and when he allows the talent to rust he is actually losing what he has. The arm which is palsied and the ear which never exercises always atrophies. Likewise use is the only just title to what we have. We cannot take it with us when we go;

Dairy Advance Shown in State

Nebraska, not ordinarily thought of as a dairy state, now has 272 head of milk cows in the official cow testing associations. These herds contain 4,268 cows and belong to twelve associations.

The monthly report just being mailed to all the members from the agricultural college shows that 429 of the cows produced more than 40 pounds of butterfat in February. This number of high producing cows is constantly increasing due to culling and better feeding suggested by the official testers and adopted by the members. M. L. Flack and Jay Pierson, who have charge of cow testing, say:

During February, twelve more cows were sold to the stockyards as unprofitable by members who are paying attention to the production figures. Four more men bought purebred sires to replace the scrubs in their herds. This improvement through culling and breeding is going on constantly.

The Douglas County association, the oldest in the state, has now completed three full years of testing. During that time the average production per cow in the association has increased from 260 to 288 pounds of butterfat. The Tri-County association has increased the average per cow 13½ pounds in two years, and the Lancaster-Seward association has increased its average per cow 10 pounds of butterfat in one year. These increases have been brought about largely by culling out the poor cows and by better feeding methods. The additional butterfat per cow is largely clear profit to the dairymen because they have eliminated their losses and concentrated their feed and work on the higher producing cows.

Nebraska now has thirty-seven herds on its honor roll, having produced an average of 300 pounds or more of butterfat per cow in a year. The Lancaster-Seward association leads the list as an association with a herd average of 310 pounds per cow. Calves for boys and girls clubs being sponsored by the various associations are being found in these high producing herds this year. A few years ago it was necessary to go out of the state to buy calves from cows with known production records of over 300 pounds of butterfat, Mr. Flack says.
