Ban Johnson may be down, but he's never out.

Much warmer and balmy. Splendid for out-door work.

A radical is anyone who believes in the entire constitution.

"This is not a leap year," declares a contemporary, except, of course, for pedestrians.

To the pure all things are pure, even the pure country buttermilk one gets at a lunch counter.

A year ago it was Smedley Butler that people were afraid to invite to parties. Now it's Sinclair Lewis.

When a thief in Denver, Colo., was brought before a judge, he was found to be wearing the teeth and shoes of his victim.

New Orleans is the next big city in danger, and a great old city. We hope she will slide through with very little damage.

One way to success is to create a job for yourself, but so many fall into the error of making more work for everybody else.

Omaha is all a quiver over their new bridge across the Missouri river while Plattsmouth is as united as the bonds of matrimony.

Everybody thinks Junior's first attempts to use the telephone are just too cute though we haven't inquired as to central's opinion.

For thirteen years a black cat has attended every service in a church in Bristol, England. It lives in the building and is fed by the parishioners.

At home some people think they are the "whole cheese," but when they attend a meeting away from home they hardly amount to a pinch of Limberger.

"I don't care," observes an agony column contributor. "Go ahead with your divorce." Such perfect harmony seems all too rare between married people nowadays.

We are optimists enough to hope that the war in Nicaragua will be over before the president's observer has had the opportunity to discover what it's all about.

Hans Selvers' court house lawn meets with praise of all passers-by. It is indeed a beauty, and shows the workmanship of one who knows how. You are a dandy, Hans.

It would be interesting to know what John Hays may be thinking of his country's present performance in China, and it would be a good deal more interesting to hear what Henry Adams may be saying.

Chicago has 153 women worth more than a million dollars. This news item, inadvertently published, indicates that pre-eminence in gun-totin' and rum-runnin' is not the Windy City's sole claims to distinction.

Paint praise will not obstruct a flow of words.

Still beautiful and bright, is Old Sol in his delight.

The flood sufferers will be relieved as rapidly as possible.

The flood districts don't seem to be getting better very fast.

An accident insurance company lists the bathtub as a menace to safety. Not that people wash themselves to death, but they will persist in stepping on the soap.

Clubwomen of Sullivan, Ind., want all cats belled to save birds, but since birds usually are too young to fly when cats get them we cannot see that the reform would result in anything better than birds being eaten to music.

It seems a little discouraging to read that Prof. Irving Fisher's analysis of money says that the dollar of 1913 is worth only 71 cents; but when you think that you didn't save any money that year, it makes you feel like a prophet and a wizard.

THE WAY TO MONARCHY

Almost every day the papers quote somebody of prestige or substance to the effect that Mr. Coolidge can have the nomination next year if he wants it. The "Coolidge Ifs" are a numerous and impressive colony. Big Business seems to be for the president to a man. One by one the politicians, both the quick and the lame ducks, are humming the Coolidge refrain.

None of the faithful, however, so far as we have seen, has attempted to say why Mr. Coolidge should be so unprecedentedly honored. Senator Borah, to be sure, did say, didactically, that the president "was entitled to the nomination," but he refrained from giving particulars.

Now comes Senator Norris of Nebraska with a searching analysis of the situation and a grave protest against the danger of overriding the third-term tradition. Mr. Norris concedes that Mr. Coolidge can nominate himself, not because of any special personal quality but by reason of the stupendous power vested in the office through the agency of patronage. Apparently, too, there is no "if" in Mr. Norris' mind as to Mr. Coolidge's desires. The Nebraska Senator says the Southern Republican machine in the southern states, which is "universally admitted to be corrupt," is already preparing to send Coolidge delegates to the next convention. Signs of similar activity are discernible in other sections. The sur-render to the Anti-Saloon League in the appointment of the ludicrously incompetent Haynes as prohibition commissioner was a piece of political strategy explained on no ground other than the Coolidge candidacy.

With the personal or official deserts of Mr. Coolidge Mr. Norris is not concerned. It is the violation of the third-term tradition that alarms him. The precedent established by Washington and followed by Jefferson is in Mr. Norris' opinion, a far-seeing judgment "founded on justice," founded upon the perpetuity of the union, upon the happiness and welfare of the people. He sees danger in our departure from that precedent, a danger which "leads directly towards a monarchy."

Is Mr. Norris needlessly disturbed? Imagination is put to it, indeed, to metamorphose Calvin Coolidge into a man on horseback. Imagination put-tering with that task is simply spinning fancies. There is no threatening personality in Mr. Coolidge, but this ambition which he is being encouraged to entertain threatens an institution. Once we inaugurate a president for the third time, even though he has served but two and a fraction terms, the injunction against the third term will have been morally undermined. There is no imperial destiny in the Coolidge horoscope but, as Mr. Norris sees it, the president is smoothing the ways toward a life tenure of the White House by some virile successor daring enough to attempt it.

The Norris fears may be pool-poled now. They will have to be met in the next campaign if Mr. Coolidge, as a candidate, raises the issue.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

IF YOU DO AND IF YOU DON'T
F. V.'s and the adherents of Lucy Stone may be neighbors geographically but they are antipodean in sentiment. The Lucy Stone League, with Washington as its chief battle ground, wages a valiant fight for the right of women to retain their maiden names after marriage; while in Virginia right under its nose, "first family" women are protesting against being obliged to do that very thing.

Virginia, it seems, demands that women who have once registered in their own names and subsequently annexed a husband and another cognomen shall, the next time they register, ignore the latter appellation and sign their maiden names to the lists. And Virginia women don't like it. They protest that they have a perfect right to use their husband's names and intend to use them. They have even signified their desire that the state law be so changed as to recognize the right of a woman to use her husband's name.

A state senator has gallantly championed the cause of the indignant voters and persuaded the senate that it should consider a bill to amend the registration law in their favor. But, speaking nationally, can anybody blame mere man if, desiring to give the woman what she wants, he throws up his hands in despair of finding out exactly what she does want?

Chauncey Depew's idea of a good time is "a lovely woman companion, a glass of wine and a piece of cake," which makes him not a white older than that Omar.

China gave us rhubarb, which ought to incline us in all kindness to her at a season when the chief joy of life is rhubarb pie.

HARD TO COMPROMISE

Rumor in Washington has it that the administration will back a farm relief measure in the next congress designed to appease the sections that were politically estranged by the president's veto of the McNary-Haugen bill. A compromise is being worked out by Senator McNary, author of the bill which the president vetoed, which, it is hoped, will be satisfactory to the corn and cotton belts on the one hand, and to the administration on the other.

Such a compromise will be found with difficulty unless one or the other of the interested parties deviates sharply from its former course. The west and south have made it clear repeatedly that they would accept nothing short of a law which in effect fixed a fair price for staple farm produce and which established an export corporation for the maintenance of such a price. Whether the funds should be provided by the government or by the industries affected was the only question in their opinion open to debate.

The administration, on the other hand, has asserted that such artificial price maintenance was economically unsound and that it would compromise on no matter involving unsound business practice. It has urged the farm communities to solve their own problems by reducing acreage and by better production and marketing methods, and has assumed that relief along sound lines for agriculture could be found by no other means. It has hoped, of course, that the price of farm produce will presently rise and that the problem will solve itself; but thus far since congress adjourned there has been no trend in that direction. On the contrary, both corn and wheat have reached new low levels, and the demand for relief from the west is as imperative as before.

It will require the nicest kind of finesse on the part of the administration to compromise the farm relief situation without conceding everything to the farm position. There is no middle ground between natural prices dictated by supply and demand, and artificial prices maintained through the use of public funds.

TELL US WHY
Again and again it has been officially stated that American warships are in China only to protect American lives and that the policy of this government in the face of any immediate danger is to evacuate Americans from interior points to cities on the coast. It is therefore difficult to understand the presence of seven American warships in an imposing fleet of 36 foreign battleships and destroyers suddenly massed at Hankow. For Hankow is 600 miles up the Yangtze river from Shanghai in the interior of China, and the number of Americans officially reported in the city—85—could be taken on in a single load. Then why is this great foreign fleet at Hankow, with American warships standing by?

Keep Eliminative System Active
Good Health Requires Good Elimination
ONE can't feel well when there is a retention of poisonous waste in the blood. This is called a toxic condition, and is apt to make one tired, dull and languid. Other symptoms are sometimes toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many people have learned the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, when the kidneys seem functionally inactive. Everywhere one finds enthusiastic Doan's users. Ask your neighbor!
