Great Britain is a country where the word "comrade" does not mean friendly.

For people who got such a late start in the war business, the Chinese are apt pupils.

Mebea Secretary Mellon decided to cut down the size of paper money just for the change.

A girl won a national oratorical contest. It's nice to know the ladies are learning to talk a little.

It isn't a genuine gold strike unless the avoidraps of ore taken out equals that of the sucker taken in.

If President Coolidge is going west for the summer he had better study up on the history of Custer's last stand.

Too many boys are training for the white collar jobs, says a professor. Well, somebody has to do that kind of mental labor.

A film actress newlywed says she means to stay married. Most of them spend at least a little time alone between husbands.

We saw a picture the other day of the 15,000,000th Ford. They must be some mistake. We counted 15,201, 536 of them last Sunday.

A man came into this office this week and told us he was pleased with something we had written about him, and appreciated it. We fainted.

Captain Robert A. Dollar, 80, the ship magnate, says when he's 100 he'll take up golf. It does take a lot of moral courage to go in for that game.

The Buffalo Courier and Express thought of this after all the rest of us had failed; "Maybe John Bull will decide after all that a China shop is no place for him."

It may be, as scientists assert, that earthworms really sing, but the intelligent creatures maintain a heavy silence when one wishes to mobilize a few of them for fishing purposes.

Thousands of graduates have just come through the ordeal of being soundly advised by their elders. No doubt the graduates would be glad to give their oratorical heeklers a sound thrashing.

One quip that has kept reappearing in various forms for some time seems to have run its merry course. At least, we have not seen in print the query: What if Lindbergh should turn out to be Lon Chaney?

After a woman has knocked over a table and table lamp and bruised the piano and several chairs in the pursuit of a moth in the living room, we often wonder if the moth, left to his natural desires could have been half so destructive.

Lindbergh is tiring of it. He wants to come home. But what relief will that afford? He will be eaten alive from the time he hits New York until he resumes his routine as an aerial "star route" mail carrier.

Coolidge is something of a connoisseur of mountains, what with his early contact with the Green and White mountains of New England, and his recent preliminary studies of the Black Mountains of Dakota. Next year Birmingham will no doubt ask him to try Red Mountain or Shades Mountain.

South Dakota never had much attention before.

The Soviet thinks the British are going too far in dissembling their love.

The man who lives to tell the tale usually devotes the rest of his life to telling it.

The companies show remarkable ingenuity in making their buses so near air tight.

"That's too bad" said the Boston book censor, as he refused to let the man read the novel.

When a jealous man marries a jealous woman there is something going every minute.

Men and eggs have much in common. The hard-boiled show up yellow if you go deep enough.

Mr. Coolidge's determination to run again confirms the old theory that troubles always come in three's.

"Is Man a Machine?" was the subject of a debate in an eastern city. Yes, but the driver sits in the back seat.

Another argument for a big navy may be found in the rivalry of the cities to have cruisers named after them.

The old-fashioned college grad who used to borrow his father's pipe now finds he can get along with his mother's cigarettes.

One of the celebrated Dolly sisters has married the son of a Canadian tobacco magnate. Look out alimony, you're gone be paid.

Feaches Browning bobs up again, asking for counsel fees. We don't know about the fees, but she certainly needs the counsel.

The new army blouses have "graceful, flaring skirts," according to a news item. The skirt is an ancient form of dress that used to be a fad among women.

We deplore the newspaper tendency to refer to Captain Lindbergh as Chevallier Lindbergh when he has devoted virtually his whole life to earning the title of Slim.

Leland Stanford, Jr., university stands amid palm-lined paths in a magnificent reservation of 9,000 acres. Everything—even education—is measured in California by acreage.

Spoiled Wisconsin strawberries are finding a market among bootleggers. They have communicated to "the trade" that they will make wine again this summer of the berries unfit for sale. Last year they bought more than a carload.

We can remember when the chief ambition of the colymbist of the Philadelphia Ledger was to throw a monkey wrench into a threshing machine separator. But recently he developed a new ambition. It is to be arrested for disorderly conduct in a cabaret at the age of 98.

The burglars who robbed the Jesse Livermores of New York of several thousand dollars worth of jewels, were courteous and considerate. They declined to take a number of jewels of sentimental value. Men of such good breeding as these rents showed may one day become much esteemed robbers and thieves. Indeed they may raise the lines of their class.

WARNED IN TIME

In the near future watch for new seethings in China. The differences between Nanking and Hankow have dwindled to a mere subdued gabble, with Hankow making most of the gabbling and Nanking getting ready to go ahead with the war against Peking. The Hankow government, in fact, is having a hard time to keep body and soul together, and as Hankow sinks toward dissolution, Nanking waxes over mightier and more assured. So assured is Nanking that the active Chiang Kai-shek permits neither himself nor his associates to make or boasts or to promise big things.

With Hankow as good as eliminated from the triangle, the Chinese puzzle once more simplifies itself for the time being into a two-handed game. On the one side is Chiang Kai-shek's army, unified and confident. On the other side are all reactionary and loosely allied elements which dread the establishment of a unified China, and which are under the admittedly able leadership of Sun Yat-sen. Already the southerners have felt the stir of a new campaign and tentatively, here and there, have been extending their lines northward. That they venture to do this without fear of an attack in the rear is sufficient proof of the contempt in which Chiang Kai-shek holds the Hankow radicals.

When the fighting gets under way it will undoubtedly be fiercer than it was during the spectacular advance to the Yang-tse. Chang Tso-lin and his associates will be fighting for very life itself, and if any foreigners of foreign interests happen to get in the path of the war, they are almost certain to suffer. This is the way of war everywhere. It is almost as relentless and usually quite as impersonal as a tornado.

There is plenty of warning. In this instance, war is more merciful than the tornado, for it gives notice of its approach. When it strikes, all the foreigners should be far away, taking with them all the "interests" that are by any possibility movable.

IT ISN'T ALL FUN BEING RICH

A recent $100,000 robbery at the Long Island home of Jesse L. Livermore, spectacular operator in the stock market and the product exchanges, disclosed the fact that the Livermore children, two little boys, have private detectives as supplementaries. Threats of kidnapping have made it necessary to maintain constant armed guard over them. They are, in a sense, prisoners. Solitude restricts their liberty.

At their age, quite possibly, they are not conscious how greatly their lives differ from the normal life of childhood. But for their parents there is the strain of contrast anxiety and apprehension. They must undergo alarms from which other fathers and mothers are blissfully exempt. When the Long Island robbers, snarvly menacing, awakened Mrs. Livermore she was beside herself with fear for her children's safety. That the incarceration might spell danger to them was her first and ruling thought. Relief only came when she saw the miscreants depart with their booty.

It isn't fun being rich.

CURING GREEN DOCTORS

A prominent surgeon has urged that the qualifications for surgeon be raised, saying that there is too much evidence of poor surgical work being done by untrained, incompetent men.

While agreeing with the purpose of this doctor's remarks, it is to be wondered how much higher the qualifications can be raised. To enter medical school a man must now have at least three years of pre-medical college work. He spends four to six years in medical school, and two years in internship. He is lucky if he can hang out his shingle before he is thirty. If he becomes a specialist, add five years more.

The trouble seems to be that the science of surgery has broadened so much that no human being can master the subject before his is forty years of age. No profession has a longer apprenticeship, and if the curing process for green doctors is to be further lengthened, young men considering study of medicine must be independently wealthy at birth, must seek a personal endowment or must marry money.

Navy fliers can take up women friends and relatives now, says Secretary Wilbur. The secretary at last has solved that time-honored mother-in-law problem.

The height of something, probably if irony: Mailing one of those "I wish you were here" postcards from Ontario.

SATISFYING EVERYBODY

Many persons have occasion at one time or another to pass unfavorable comment upon hotels and their service. In spite of the fact that our country has an astonishingly large number of truly fine hotels, minor troubles arise and it is not uncommon to meet critics who have nothing good whatever to say about the hostilities.

As unusual, there is another side in this case and it is interestingly presented in the magazine "Hotel Management," which had a number of hotel men describe how their most unreasonable guests had behaved in their dining room. Here are a few samples:

A gentleman and his lady each had a whole cold lobster for supper and two chocolate eclaires. Both were ill and insisted that the hotel pay the doctors fee.

One guest brought his own sandwich to the dining room. After being served with ice water and butter, the waiter asked, "Then you will want nothing at all, sir?" The guest replied, "Yes, tell the captain to come here a minute. I want to know why the music doesn't start."

Another guest ordered at $ 0.00 a double sirloin steak. He kept the latter all night and next morning summoned the room waiter to have the remainder warmed over and served without charge for breakfast.

One woman strenuously objected because she was not served with white duck meat. When the manager explained that ducks have no white meat she found another outlet for her feelings, complaining of the quality of the sliced lamb served her Pomeranian.

These are offered, not to minimize the defects which some hotels certainly have, but to show that hotels in general must contend with a wide variety of human nature. Any man or woman who has been placed in such a position knows how nearly impossible it is to satisfy everybody.

As no one else intends to mention the matter, Charles Levine's flight was the longest non-stop trip ever made by a married man who did not tell his wife he was leaving.

An English judge having to put a commercial value on a wife in a claims suit thought for a moment and settled on two shillings and sixpence—about 60 cents. The wife in question had left her husband and gone with another man, which makes one wonder why the judge set so high a price on her.
