CHARGES CONSPIRACY From Wednesday's Daily— An answer and cross-petition was filed today in the case of Fred Buerstetia, receiver of the First National bank, vs. Oscar H. Allen, et al., in the district court, by the defendant J. V. Mayes. It is alleged in the cross-petition of Mr. Mayes that he has been the owner of the land in question in the case since June 8, 1927. It is further alleged in the objection to the appointment of a receiver for the farm in dispute, that a conspiracy was formed by the defendant Allen, the Elmwood State bank to start the proceedings in the case to depreciate the value of the land.

VERA REYNOLDS AT WORK. DENIES SUICIDE ATTEMPT Los Angeles, Aug. 30.—Vera Reynolds, film actress, was back at work at the DeMille studio Monday, not at all pleased with police for reporting her last night's illness on an "attempted suicide" blank. "I don't know I didn't try to kill myself. Do I look as if I had?" Miss Reynolds said. Police said they went to the Reynolds home when a hospital reported a call that a person had swallowed poison at that address. Officers reported they found an empty bottle of "K" which Miss Reynolds showed indications of having swallowed poison.

INTERESTING FAIR EXHIBIT

The farmers of the state of Nebraska and everyone interested in the progress of the farm industry of the state will be attracted to the Electrical Farm exhibit at the coming Nebraska State Fair.

This exhibit has been made possible thru the co-operation of the Nebraska State Committee on the Relation of Electricity to Agriculture and the State Agricultural College. The actual work is being done by the Nebraska College of Agriculture, under the direct supervision of Professor E. E. Brackett and manufacturers of farm equipment are furnishing machinery and electric devices for display.

This exhibit has been prepared not for the purpose of selling any equipment for the farm or farm home, but to demonstrate the possibilities of labor saving devices for the farm and to show in actual operation the many inventions whereby the farmer may use electrical energy as a "hired man."

Electricity has done much for other industries and for labor in the urban factories and the many state experiment stations are proving that the use of electricity on farms can add the farmer to reduce cost and increase production.

An elaborate model farm, electrical equipment will be shown in operation. There will also be displayed portable electric motors, cream separators, pumps, milking machines, feed grinders, elevators, electric refrigerators, ranges and washing machines. Charts will show the cost of the various devices.

The committee is composed of H. C. Kenney, Omaha, Nebraska representing the Nebraska Farmers Union; George Jackson, Secy. Nebraska State Board of Agriculture, H. J. Laughlin, Lincoln, Secy. Nebraska Dept. of Agriculture, A. J. Gutzmer, Norfolk, Nebraska State Dairyman's Ass'n., S. R. McKelvie, Lincoln, Publisher, Nebraska Farmer, Fred Tomsson, Grand Island, Farmer, H. D. Attorney General Opposes the Grain Exc. Rules

Declares Rule About Weighing Grain Not Only Against Specific Law, But Restrains Trade.

A perpetual injunction restraining the Omaha Elevator company and the Trans-Mississippi Grain company and other member companies from enforcing the rules of the Omaha Grain Exchange with respect to weighing and a judgment that they cease from entering into any combination or conspiracy to restrain trade are asked by Attorney General Spillman, in an answer filed in the Lancaster district court Tuesday in the case brought by those companies, along with the Grain Exchange, to enjoin him from enforcing the Osterman act passed at the last session of the legislature.

In addition the attorney general asks that the two grain companies named be cited for contempt of court. He cites a supreme court decision in which they were adjudged guilty of combining in restraint of trade, and wants them to show cause why they should not be punished for disregarding the order contained therein. Attached to the answer is a copy of the supreme court decree, which the state says, results in the two companies not having clean hands in court today.

The decree was written by Judge Letton in 1906, and was an action which the state brought to dissolve the Nebraska Grain Dealers association, and enjoining all members, the two named being included, in enforcing any rules or orders that would limit or restrain competition in grain, control prices, divide business or profits, pool prices, or fix any standard or figure by which grain prices could be controlled.

The attorney general has several defenses. He insists that the plaintiffs have an adequate remedy at law and need not try to restrain him from enforcing the statute; that not only are the rules requiring all grain to be sold on Omaha official weights, with a non member being charged twice as much as for re-weighing and inspection as a member, and subjecting to discipline all members who buy grain on any other weights are in violation of the Osterman law requiring shippers' weights at points of inspection to be accepted, but that they also contravene the statutes against combinations in restraint of trade, defining trusts and combinations and prohibiting combination as to prices, as well as the federal grain standards act.

The state also contends that the grain exchange is a public market, and as such subject to reasonable regulation; that the law in question is a valid enactment and its enforcement, a part of his duty, is a matter of public interest and best, and prevented from doing so by the amount of grain shipped to Omaha because it excludes buyers who want to take shippable or destination weights, enables competing markets to solicit business belonging to it and discourages shipments by handlers of grain who do not wish to be governed by the rules complained of. It is further charged that they retard and delay shipments, depress prices, discriminate against the public and certain outside buyers; that they result in hardships to shippers of high grade grain and commission merchants that they tend to develop a monopoly for the benefit of elevator owners at Omaha, and that the plaintiffs have conspired to establish a monopoly with the wicked intent to injure and put competition out of business. Attention is also called to the claim that there are members who wish to obey the law and are prevented from doing so by the threat of punishment for breaking rules.

The state contends that the enforcement of the rules cost the farmers and shippers many thousands of dollars loss daily, that they are not in effect at any other grain exchange, and that Kansas City is now soliciting business in this state promising to accept shippers weights. The attorney general says that he invokes the equity powers of the court independently of quo warranto to secure the orders asked.

Poincare and his cabinet after a most successful career of a year without a break, had to undergo the trials of a function in honor of the event. At first the treasury was empty, the franc near valueless, but now there is a billion in the treasury with the franc almost restored to par.

Lindy Flying Over 'Old Job Town' Today

Will Salute Bird City Kansas, Where He Worked as a Stunt Airman.

Charles A. Lindbergh, New York-to-Paris aviator, will fly over Bird City, Kans., at noon today. This was arranged by Holmes A. "Banty" Rogers, a wheat rancher of Bird City, for whom the flier worked between July and October in 1922 as a parachute jumper.

According to Rogers, when he purchased the Lincoln Standard airplane at Lincoln in July, 1922, Lindbergh, pleaded that he be taken along as parachute jumper. "I liked the ways of that young fellow," said Rogers, "so I hired him. He was certainly a quiet, bashful kid, and he kept to himself all the time."

"He didn't care much for money, but worked for his room and board and a small salary. He told me his folks wanted him to come home and be a farmer, but he didn't care much for that kind of life. He wanted to be an aviator, but in those days he never mentioned flying over the ocean and becoming famous like he is now."

Mentioned in Book "We." "He worked for me until I sold the 'ship' in October," Lindbergh, in his book, "We," mentions Rogers and his barnstorming days as a parachute jumper.

The flier recognized his former employer the moment he saw him, and even held up the banquet reception committee while the two discussed for a few minutes their former "circus" days.

"Say, 'Slim,' I want you to fly over our town when you go west," requested Rogers.

"Let me look at my map first," replied the flier. After perusing the map, Lindbergh said, "I'll be there and I would like to stop, but I can't do it. I know the place, and you can watch for me about noon. I might come down and let the wheels of the airplane touch the ground and go up again."

"Will you, 'Slim'?" "I sure will." He Bought the Plane. Rogers, all smiles, thanked the flier and left, making room for the banquet reception committee. The ship from which Lindbergh jumped in his parachute, the flier told Rogers, he purchased later, and sold it for $1,300. "I sold that ship to a fellow for one thousand dollars, and I don't know how 'Slim' got it later," said Rogers.—World-Herald.

GAS TAX YIELDS MORE THAN SEVEN MILLION

A total of $7,365,909.65 has been collected by the state from the gasoline tax since the law went into effect two years and four months ago, according to a check up made last Saturday by T. W. Bass, head of the gas tax bureau. This figure includes all money received up to and including August 27. The collections during the month of August amounted to $648,411.31. This amount, however, includes the proceeds for the months of July and August, because of the change made in the method of collecting the tax which was recently put into effect in accordance with a law passed by the last legislature. The tax is now collected on importation of gasoline rather than on sales.
