Bailey Predicts Three on Ballot

Norris the Man to Vote for, He Says If You Want to Become an Experiment Station.

"If we want to turn Nebraska into an experiment station, Norris would be the man to vote for," said Representative E. P. Bailey of Carleton, Thayer county, one of the floor leaders of the republican majority in the recent legislature who visited the capitol Friday. He does not admit that Coolidge is out of the race.

"It appears that the republicans are split three ways in Nebraska," he said. "Some are for Norris, some for Lowden and others for Coolidge. I am certain three presidential candidates will be placed on the primary ballot as preferential candidates next April. The names on the ballot will be Coolidge, Norris and Lowden. They can be placed there by petition and I believe that will be done."

"As for farm relief I very much doubt if the legislature recently before congress will be what the farmers themselves want. There is a way to solve the farm relief problem and President Coolidge is now being educated along that line and in the end he may be able to solve it better than any one else. If we have the immense crops that are now promised there will be no need of farm relief. I never saw the people so well satisfied with conditions as they are now. The attendance at our county fair increased one-third this year, and this is an indication of the prosperity of the people."

Secretary of State Marsh, when questioned regarding the primary election law he would place the name of Coolidge upon the ballot as a preferential candidate if a petition containing 100 names from each congressional district is presented to him. He pointed out that the law states that presidential candidates shall be printed on the ballot "solely upon the petition of their political supporters in Nebraska" and "without such persons themselves signing the petition or acceptance."

Mr. Marsh said if a petition candidate should submit to him a statement that he did not desire his name to appear on the ballot it might be different, as it would seem unreasonable to make a man run against his will.
