GROUNDLESS IDIOSYNCRACY
Herbert Hoover proposes a question very pertinent to the time, when he says: "I often wonder why it is that insurance must be secured by solicitation."

It is a peculiar fact that, with the exception of fire insurance, practically everyone has to be "sold" by the ability and tenacity of the agent, rather than by their own wish to purchase an indispensable commodity.

Yet the hazards of death, accident, liability, and the rest are every bit as imminent as the chance of fire, perhaps more so. This idiosyncrasy of entire races of people, to "dodge" the insurance seller, is groundless and foolish. It has gone to the extent where insurance selling is the basis for numberless jokes. But the humor quickly reacts on the joker when he dies leaving a penniless family, or is injured, or has his business wiped out by court judgment.

Persons will eventually realize that they should give every assistance toward furthering anything so entirely for their own safety and benefit. And when that comes to pass; more people will come to the insurance dealer's office, instead of trying to avoid him in theirs.

Light Pole Falls and Damages Automobile

John Chambers Has Close Call From Injury in Accident of Elm Street Saturday.

From Monday's Daily—
Saturday evening shortly before 7 o'clock when the heavy wind storm came up, John Chambers had a very close call from serious injury when his car was badly wrecked in the crash of an electric light pole near the Heisel mill.

The car of Mr. Chambers was passing along Elm street near the vicinity of the mill when the storm arose and without warning a large pole was blown over, striking the front portion of the car and missing the driver only by a margin of inches, and which is most fortunate as the driver would probably have been instantly killed had he received the full force of the falling pole.

The pole tore off the windshield from the car, smashed the steering wheel and tore off the entire front of the top of the touring car, burying Mr. Chambers beneath the wreckage and from which he was finally extricated by persons passing along the street a short time after the accident.

Mr. Chambers received a few minor cuts from the flying glass of the broken windshield but is feeling most fortunate that the accident was no worse and that he was able to escape with his life from the accident.

The car was taken to the Frady garage where it is awaiting repair and will require considerable work on the top to place it in service again.

The home was very prettily arranged with the colorful asters and other of the fall flowers and made a most charming background for the delights of the evening.

There were six tables of bridge and in the playing Mrs. L. W. Eggenberger won the first prize, Mrs. Frank Beator the second prize and Mrs. E. C. Harris the consolation prize.

The occasion was one that all members of the party will remember with pleasure.
