The Inca revolutionists seem to have a million-dollar ambition coupled with 10-cent ammunition.

When a man learns more about what to eat and when to eat it, many of his ills will disappear as if by magic.

Both parties would feel better if they had any earthly idea of how or where to obtain an amphibian candidate for 1928.

One theory of the chiropractors appears to be that one has to have a perfect back in order to put up a really first-class front.

The brain does not get tired in one sense, but does in another, that is in the kind of use it is put to. The cause that tired feeling.

It is too much to hope a program of flood control can be sufficiently carried out to be of substantial benefit by the next flood season.

Sociologist says mothers ought to pick their daughters' husbands—providing, of course the daughters have overlooked anything worth picking.

Colorado is one of the great natural summer playgrounds for this region. It is close at hand. It has everything to offer in delightful temperature and gorgeous mountain scenery. No vacation could be more exhilarating than one spent among the snowy peaks of that state.

"Easy money" spends faster than it arrives.

Hawaii is beginning to look like a "fly-by-night" resort.

It isn't company that misery loves, but merely an audience.

American soldiers in China have been advised to learn at least 300 Chinese words. No doubt they would rather fight.

On its fiftieth anniversary the phonograph should be honored as one talker that never says a word unless encouraged.

After all, when one sees a hen-pecked man one rarely escapes the feeling that there is such a thing as the eternal fitness of things.

The melancholy days are come, Despite all incognitos, When all men's rest is on the bum Because of the mosquitoes.

We are doing very well in our trade with Russia despite non-recognition. It is money that talks and the two governments do not interfere.

The members of the American Legion who visit Paris will have the time of their lives. France opens its arms to them and nothing will be too good for the Legion visitors. France has decreed a national holiday to commemorate the occasion.

Lincoln does not mind an extra session of the legislature, but perhaps the legislature may. Nothing in it but traveling expenses.

It may soon be a question as to what extent the authority of health authorities in the schools exceeds that of parents and guardians.

Many Americans, in France awaiting divorces, spend their time at the gambling tables of the Riviera. The gambling habit is hard to break.

The old testament has again been translated by prominent theological students. Pretty soon, if this continues, the sacredness will disappear.

Just when we supposed we were suffering from a summer cold a friend remarks that hay fever times is at hand. Well, here's sneezing at you.

What Secretary Hoover said, was that he wanted a large sign placed on top of the tallest buildings in every city giving the name of the place.

Now we hear that grade crossings are to be abolished by state authority. Work to this most desirable end can not begin too soon. Details are lacking.

The shortest and the longest days of the year are permanent calendar fixtures. The shortest two weeks of the year are always the one you select for your vacation.

The mayor of one large city, having served nearly twenty years, is again a candidate for re-election. He knows a good thing, but should give some one else a chance. However, he does not see it in that way.

Dr. Tilney of Columbia university announces that the human brain is now in its intermediate development, that advancement in power is in evidence. It does look as if something was still lacking. Now we know.

Now we are told there is no real education. That the elementaries, high schools and colleges are disconnected, disjointed and purposeless. This confirms our suspicions there was something wrong in our school systems.

Senator Brookhart of Stoughton Wis., made another speech, closely following the lines of former addresses. The miseries of the farmer and the duties of the government were dwelt upon. The stock in trade holds out.

The Mississippi Valley Flood association calls for the appropriation of $100,000,000 annually for ten years for flood control and prevention. This is a pretty good-sized order as such things go. But that is the way it is.

THE PROGRESSIVE DILEMMA

Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, heir apparent to the progressive throne made vacant by the death of the elder LaFollette, declares that he would prefer to see a wet progressive in office than a dry reactionary. He adds, significantly, that he believes that Gov. Smith of New York "is honest and that he is a genuine progressive."

Thus the dilemma of the progressive Republicans is disclosed by their leader. Within their own party there is so far no candidate for the presidency who approaches their notion of what a candidate for that office should be. Lowden, Dawes, Hoover, et al., cannot, by any stretch of the word, be called progressive. Lowden and Dawes may be willing to meet the northwest half-way in solving the farm problem. But this will not make them satisfactory to Senator Norris and his associates, whose progressivism is too thorough to be placated by a little pap thrown to their constituents. Senator Borah, true enough, is spoken of as a presidential possibility, but even the Senator himself has refused to take this talk very seriously.

But among the presidential aspirants of the two great parties there is one whose progressivism is above question. Unfortunately, he does not happen to be a republican, which is just where the rub comes in for the Republican progressives. It presents them with a dilemma even more forbidding than that of 1924. They have engaged in muckwump movements within their party and suffered the expected punishment. But when it comes to supporting a Democrat—well, that is something else again.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

INDECISION

In his address at the opening of Mexican congress, President Calles expresses regret for the somewhat uncertain relations between the United States and Mexico, and declares that the whole trouble is attributed to the "indecision" of the American government. The more we think of it the more inclined we are to believe Calles is right.

The Mexican president says there has been a general and inclusive complaint that Mexico was about to confiscate American property. If there have been any concrete instances of the American attitude, there have been some diverting incidents, such as the charge that Calles was aiding the anti-Diaz (anti-United States and pro-Nicaragua) party in Nicaragua. There was also a special proclamation from the United States department of state that Mexico and bolshevist Russia are hand-in-glove, but it was only a jumble of hearsay and trivialities. When it has come down to the main charge that our oil investors are about to be robbed, there is nothing substantial forthcoming. It is rather a neat little scholding that allies administrators. It is not severe or even discourteous, and for this reason it is the more effective.

LEGS

Time was in the days of our grandmothers when a perfect lady was not supposed to possess anything worth speaking of between the ankles and the chin. Nowadays the average man is like the London bus driver. A lady was climbing up the rear stairway of a bus in London, a heavy wind was blowing, and she was trying to keep down her skirts properly. The conductor exhorted: "Step along lively, Mum. Legs is no treat to me!"

What ever they may have been, they are certainly now no treat to anybody. Have the morals of the male section of the race deteriorated because females show more of their nether limbs?

No. Morals is a word which comes from mores. Meaning manners, and morals therefore are largely what you are used to.

SCHOOL DAYS

Well, the boys are off to college again. It's getting harder and harder to get a horseshod these days what with the great demand for fullbacks. Some of the boys who never saw a typewriter are very good at the touch method just the same. One eastern university put up a new dormitory during the summer. Probably just to keep up appearances. The college yell is a grand thing, but father has the loudest one coming. But youth must have his fling—if it's only an inkwell at some freshman's cap.

A farmer in the state of Washington has gone far toward solving his problems by making gas out of alfalfa hay. Lack of political technic is revealed by his failure to make gas out of his farm problems.

Giving the P. R. THEIR DUE

Commenting upon Boss Vare's present fight to retain control of Philadelphia, the New York World phloemly doubts that a Vare victory would impair Republican prospects in Pennsylvania for 1928, observing that "when they go to the polls, Pennsylvania Republicans are not usually subject to moral scruples."

We hold no brief for Pennsylvania Republicans. Their case is pretty sad. However, to give even the Pennsylvania Republicans their dues, we call attention to the fact that Pennsylvania, outside of Philadelphia, gave Vare's Democratic opponent a majority of something like 50,000 in the general election which followed the notorious senatorial primary. Needless to say, this was done with Republican votes.

For Philadelphia there can be no excuse. But is it fair to charge the rest of the state with Philadelphia's sins? We believe not.

THE MUSE AMUSED

When we are sad and would be glad, what though forbade to wake her, we rouse the Muse and blithely choose to sing of Reed and Baker. These two, they say, are in the way of running for the senate, and who that be imbued with glee can save with laughter ken it? The puerile Sam, not worth a ----- in war time or pacific, and mighty Jim, whose proven vim is easily terrific. Imagine these, ye sons of ease, who like a lusty ruction, and how the sham opponent Sam were sent to his destruction! The tiger's grin, a sudden din, a deep, full-throated rattle, and then the soft rich laughter that oft attends one-sided battle. O when was there a sight so rare, a spectacle so certain! so let us wait on fickle fate and beg her raise the curtain.

Private estimates would now place the probable cotton crop at around 14,000,000 bales.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

Copy for this Department furnished by County Agent

School Lunch Sandwiches
Sandwiches for school lunches can not be made appetizing and wholesome without good bread. Children will often eat more bread if different kinds are served or if the sandwiches are in different shapes. Raisins, dried cottage cheese, brown or maple sugar, cottage cheese and nuts may be added to either white or whole wheat bread to give it a different flavor. A sandwich can easily be cut in different shapes with a cookie cutter. Some suggested sandwich fillings are: Sliced tender meat, lettuce, celery, cottage cheese, brown or maple sugar, baked beans and lettuce, chopped nuts seasoned with salt, nuts and grated cheese, scrambled eggs and crisp bacon, hard boiled eggs and chopped boiled ham, peanut butter alone or mixed with olive oil, lemon juice, chopped pickles or ground pineapple, etture and mayonnaise. Sweet sandwich fillings once in a while to make a variety are: prune, date, fig or raisin pulp, lemon juice and nuts, sweetened chocolate spread on graham crackers, and honey and ground nuts.

Why Pickles Shriveled
Pickles shrivel for several reasons, among the most common are: having the salt or vinegar solution too strong, leaving the pickles in the brine too long, reheating the vinegar too many times, and using too much sugar. The following suggestions may help prevent shriveling: Leave the pickles for 48 hours in a salt brine made by putting one cup of salt in one gallon of water. Remove them and put them in plain vinegar for ten days. Six pounds of sugar to a gallon of vinegar will make a desirable sweet pickle. Only four pounds of this sugar should be added at first. When the other two pounds are added, the vinegar should be poured off the cucumbers and reheated to dissolve the sugar and then poured over the pickles again while it is hot. To makew hat is hot to be a better looking product, it is the practice in some households to "green" pickles by heating them with vinegar in a copper vessel. Experiments have shown that in this treatment copper acetate is formed and that pickles take up quantities of it. Copper acetate is poisonous. Alum may be used to make the pickle firm but its use is questionable and unnecessary if the right methods of pickling are followed.

The Best Poultry Remedies
The best remedy for most poultry diseases is a set of common, homely tools, a broom, shovel, scraper and spray pump, some crude oil or other spray material, and the necessary energy and initiative on the part of the flock owner to keep the outfit in use. The Nebraska poultry keepers who have made the most net profit during the four past years in the University Record Flock are the ones who use this kind of a remedy to prevent diseases among their flocks. They save the money that other people put into high priced, brightly colored, and strong smelling dopes of doubtful value. The money they save with the broom, shovel, scraper and spray pump adds to their net profit. Clean houses, clean feed and water, and clean ground for the chickens to run over are the four points of their profitable businesses.

Plattsmouth to Attend County Fair on Friday

Large Number of the Citizens Plan to Help Swell the Crowds for East Cass Day

From Tuesday's Daily—The county fair of Weeping Water which is held this week gives promise of being one of the largest fairs that the county has held and the fair management has planned many very attractive features to give the three day fair that opens on Wednesday.

The opening day has been designated as Farm Bureau day, and on Friday east Cass county day will be held and each day will see special programs held that will provide a variety of entertainment of all kinds for the fair visitors. It is planned to send a very large delegation from this city at the fair on Friday and all those who are going and can carry additional persons are urged to go with their cars filled up and to help boost the big fair.

The county fair is maintained by the county and represents every section of the county and all sections should join in the big event that will give an exposition of the many fine crops, the great stock and hog farms and the work of the women of the county and the schools arranged for the inspection of the public. Let everyone who can, plan to attend the fair on Friday and by their presence help swell the demonstration extending to the fair and our neighbors at Weeping Water.

UNDER-COVER AGENT DRAVES TERM IN JAIL

Los Angeles Sept. 20.—Weeping in his mother's arms, Frank P. Farley, under-cover agent for the prohibition department, late Monday was sentenced to from one to ten years San Quentin for involuntary manslaughter. Farley pleaded guilty to causing the death of E. Percy Ingmire, Los Angeles oil company official, killed in an automobile crash last April. Plea for probation was denied.
